NRA TO LAST, ROOSEVELT SAYS

Today

Your Congress Resumes.
Another High Trip.
Japan Looks Ahead.
Kansas Meets Gunmen.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

FOR THE 73rd time, the Congress of the United States will meet and start work today. Learned lawmakers will find many things worthy of discussion and some will believe that they could do everything better. However, in view of President Roosevelt's popularity and the general feeling that a man who at least is trying to do something should be upheld, objectors will smother their objections.

Republican leaders announce that they intend to "withhold for the present any concentrated party attack upon President Roosevelt's program." That would seem to be wise.

A BAG containing 600,000 cubic feet of gas carried Maj. Fordney, of Marine Corps, and Lieut. Settle, of the Navy, more than 61,000 feet into the air.

They plan another flight into the stratosphere, with a balloon of 1,500,000 cubic feet, and hope to go up 15 miles, or more, possibly penetrating the "ozone layer" which encloses the earth about 15 miles up.

That exploration may lead to plans for bringing down supplies of that ozone, which is the life-giving quality of the atmosphere, for distribution as needed.

REAL EXPLORATION of the air ocean above us will begin when men go up between four and five hundred miles and look out from our attenuated atmosphere into the "absolute zero" of the ether, or whatever the substance is that fills all space between this group of solar systems and the nebulae.

YOUNG HENRY PU-YI, once heir to the imperial throne of China, descendant of the Manchus that came down from Manchuria and made themselves rulers of China long ago, finds himself now suddenly Emperor of the old Manchurian homeland, rechristened Manchukuo.

THE CHINESE republic took away the youthful Pu-Yi's imperial prospects in China, but treated him kindly, supplying plenty of money for his elaborate household.

Japan, seizing Manchuria, and wishing to do it tactfully, made the young prince, whose ancestors once were rulers of Manchuria, the nominal head of the new Japanese possession.

THE AMBITIONS of Japan are not small, and perhaps selecting Pu-Yi as Emperor in Manchuria is part of a far-seeing plan.

Pu-Yi is now restored to the throne of his ancestors in Manchuria.

Later it might be desirable to restore him, as dummy of Japan, to the other throne of his later ancestors, as ruler of all China.

ANCIENT MONGOLIAN rulers like Ghengis Khan found it easy enough to control such vast territory, but their rule did not last. Japan might easily take possession of China, temporarily. But it is difficult for a mouse to digest an elephant. History might relate how Japan planned to swallow China and instead was swallowed by China.

Meanwhile the business of the United States is to watch events, wishing everybody all possible good fortune and confident that in the long run justice, another word for intelligence, will rule.

IN TOPEKA, Kan., as the new year was born, two automobiles scraped each other's running boards. Mrs. Clarence Potts, coming from a party with her husband and friends, stepped out of one car to see what had happened. One of five men in the other car shot her dead, and the gunmen fled.

This will make Kansas thoughtful, for states that continue dry with other states wet will naturally enjoy some monopoly of bootleg and gangster activities.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT pleased many and set a good example when he appointed Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of William Jennings Bryan, American Minister to Denmark.

It is pleasing to read about Mrs. Owen, highly intelligent and very charming specimen of American womanhood, appearing before the Danish King at the new year levee wearing "a silver embroidered black gown, with a black velvet hat interwoven with silver cloth."

Women in diplomacy will mean better and brighter embassies. Our masculine ambassadors in plain black have been dull to look at. American female ambassadors will change that.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, talking for his country to South America and the whole world on the Monroe Doctrine, states once more principles underlying that doctrine, and working for peace.

The idea is not to establish any control or coercion of even the smallest South American republic by the United States. The desire is to establish for all the nations on these two American continents protection from foreign control and invasion.

If South American statesmen would read a small pamphlet on the Monroe Doctrine, written by Sir Frederick Pollock, British authority on international law, they would get rid of their "anti-Yankee" prejudices, as regards that doctrine.

GOV. TALMADGE, of Georgia, insists that in his state, owners shall not pay more than $3 each for licensing cars and trucks. California wisely, long ago, adopted the same rule.

The theory is to avoid discouraging the automobile industry or automobile owners by excessive license fees. Cars big and little pay only $3.

The more of them the better, since the state derives income, for road building, from gasoline consumed. The bigger cars, using more, pay more.

COUNCILMEN GIVE O.K. TO JOHNSTON

NcNair's Selection Confirmed, Malone Believed 'Out'

The Democratic bloc in City Council made peace today, at least temporarily, with its leader, Mayor McNair, by unanimously confirming Leslie M. Johnston as Public Works Director in the McNair cabinet.

Thus calm replaced the turbulent scenes of yesterday, when the Democratic councilmen refused to consider Johnston's nomination.

All was quiet today. Hundreds packed Council chamber and the outside corridors in the City-County Building expecting another story show but they were disappointed.

MALONE MAY LOSE OUT

The four Democratic councilmen, in voting for Johnston along with the rest of Council, did so in he belief that James F. Malone, erstwhile Republican, would not be named Public Safety Director.

They trooped into the short Council session after a conference with David L. Lawrence, Democratic county chairman, and Cornelius D. Scully, McNair's city solicitor.

They hadn't been able to confer with McNair, but they received assurances, apparently from Lawrence and Scully, that the Mayor would not try to have Malone named Safety Director.

Malone, sponsored by M. L. Benedum, the Democrats' financial "angel," has been the issue in the split between Council and McNair.

KANE EXPLAINS

Councilman John M. Huston moved for confirmation of Johnston, who is a leader in the Citizens League. P. J. McArdle, Independent Republican, and John Kane, a leader of the Democratic faction, seconded. Explaining his vote, Kane said:

"Yesterday when we asked for a delay for the purpose of conferring with the Mayor in regard to this appointment, we did so with the idea of finding out how the department would be run, not with the purpose of

Vacations Restored To City Policemen

After an hour spent with Mayor McNair, Marshall assembled his captains and informed them that in the future the police would be given their one-day off each week and, furthermore, would receive two weeks' vacation with pay.

Mae West's Sister To Wed 2nd Time

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Beverly West, sister of Mae West, and Vladimir E. Baikoff, executive of her vaudeville troupe, yesterday obtained a license to marry. Miss West gave her age as 27 and said she was divorced September 30, 1927, in New York. Baikoff said he was 30 years old.

MAYOR PASSES CROWD TO LANG

There were 50 or more jobseekers waiting at Mayor McNair's lobby desk at 8:32 a. m. today when the Mayor, accompanied by his wife, appeared.

First in line was C. W. Eiter, 28, who hasn't worked for two years. Eiter, who lives at 1600 Eleanor street, South Side, wanted a job on the police force. He introduced himself.

The Mayor answered:

"Glad to know you."

They shook hands and Eiter told McNair he would like to get on the police force. Said McNair, after opening an envelope:

"Here, take this and see Denny."

JOKER CHANGES BILL

Eiter took the slip, which looked like a "phoney" dollar bill. It was a slip which originally had been issued by the United Boosters of the NRA and had President Roosevelt's picture printed on it. It urged everyone to go along with the NRA. But some joker had interpolated and crossed out words, so that it had become a boost for Mayor McNair and his single tax theory.

Eiter saw Public Safety Director Harmar D. Denny, Jr. Denny explained that there was a possi-

JOBHOLDERS CLAMOR FOR CITY PAY

Kerr Balks McNair's Plan to Issue Scrip Against Taxes

Five thousand city employes were clamoring for overdue pay today as the city treasury was unable to meet the payroll for the last two weeks of December.

Mayor W. N. McNair, appealed to by a delegation of health department employes, proposed that the city workers collect from citizens who are in arrears in taxes.

Indications late today were that money to meet the payroll would be raised either by borrowing against estimated revenues for 1934 or waiting another week, when it is expected several large property owners will have paid part of this year's taxes. By January 10 payroll claims will have mounted to $370,000, according to Controller James P. Kerr.

The Controller said:

"There is no cause to worry. I have every confidence the payroll will be met in a few days. Current and delinquent tax payments look as though they would improve. The city's credit is still good."

BLOCKS USE OF SCRIP

Controller Kerr, it developed, blocked an attempt by the Mayor to have Council declare an emergency and authorize issuance of scrip due bills, to be cashed by delinquent taxpayers for individual city employes. Dr. Kerr said:

"I refused to approve issuance of scrip because it is illegal, and even if legal, is unnecessary."

When a banknote pritning company representative visited the Mayor's office yesterday, it was learned, he presented samples of scrip from other cities. No Pittsburgh scrip had been printed, it was said.

All departments of the city were affected, except the police and fire bureaus. Their pay day will not arrive until next week.

BLAME PLACED

The empty treasury was blamed on failure of the people to pay 1934 taxes in the early days of January and also to the Spann bill, passed at the special session

Astor Scion to Wed In New York Feb. 6

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Miss S. S. Gillespie and John Jacob Astor, III, will be married at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church on Tuesday afternoon, February 6, it was announced today.

The Rev. Stanley Carnaghan Hughes, rector of Trinity Church, Newport, R. I., and the Rev. Dr. Roelif H. Brooks, restor of St. Thomas' Church, will officiate. Plans for the wedding have not yet been completed.

10 Hurt as Truck And Handcar Crash

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Ten workmen were injured, two seriously, in a collision between a state highway truck and a railroad handcar near Patton today. Oliver Crossman, of Patton, and Leo Plunkett, of Ashville, were taken to a hospital.

TECH CO-EDS 'RESCUED' IN FIRE

'Heroes Bring Ladders For Girls as Fire Routs 300

It was all very exciting, and provided the means for heroics on the part of male students lucky enough to fifinfid ladders down which fair co-eds climbed.

No one lost any time in fleeing from the drama, music and arts building into which the smoke poured from the tunnel, but the building was not affected by the flames.

The fire started in a conduit under the engineering building where workmen were installing a water pipe. Blow torches set fire to waste matter and the flames spread to a bulkhead door. Telephone and electric power lines were disconnected.

The draft through the tunnel swept the smoke into the drama, music and arts building. The gymnasium also was affected slightly.

When the fumes whipped into the classrooms, there was a scurry for exits. Most of the students fled by the corridors, but some made use of the ladders placed against windows by would-be heroes.

Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Tech, estimated the damage at $15.

OUTLAW LINKED TO LINDY CASE

ST. PAUL, Jan. 3. — (AP.) — County Attorney M. F. Kinkead today expressed the belief that Verne Sankey, fugitive outlaw sought for the abduction of Haskell Bohn here in June, 1932, "may have had connection" with the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

From evidence found on Sankey's ranch at Gann Valley, S. D., Kinkead said he deduced that the desperado intended to kidnap Jack Dempsey, former world's heavyweight champion, and Babe Ruth, the ball player. He declared:

"My personal opinion is that Sankey is not out of the Lindbergh picture.

"I have information that a telephone call was made from Minneapolis—at the time Sankey was living there—to New Jersey, although the New Jersey officials denied this.

"We found in the basement of Sankey's house a complete account of the Lindbergh Kidnaping case. We also found a sort of letter file that contained full accounts of Jack Dempsey's earnings and those of Babe Ruth."

Beauty Shop Opened By Anne Caldwell

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Jan. 3.—(INS.)—Anne Caldwell, former Broadway showgirl who won a $50,000 breach of promise suit seven years ago from John W. Hubbard, Pittsburgh shovel manufacturer, today had started a business career as proprietor of a cosmetic shop at Kennett Square, near here.

A year ago Miss Caldwell worked for a time as an usher in a New York movie theatre after the failure of her modiste shop in New York.

Berlin Mayor, Pal Of Walker's, Freed

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Gustav Boess, former lord mayor of Berlin and a friend of former Mayor James J. Walker, of New York City, was released today after spending nine months in jail. He had been arrested upon suspicion of fraud.

A scandal arose in the administration of Herr Boess in 1929, at a time when he was in the United States returning a European visit of Mayor Walker.

'State of the Union'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Here, in brief paragraphs, is the way President Roosevelt viewed the "State of the Union" in his address to Congress:

We are definitely "in the process" of recovery.

NRA principles present a "permanent feature of our modernized industrial structure."

Government credit has been fortified, the overwhelming majority of banks are sound, gold and silver buying is proceeding with the purpose of strengthening the financial structure.

Evasion of the spirit of tax and bank laws, and outright lawlessness in the underworld call for stringent action.

ABROAD

No great progress toward peace and trade agreements is visible.

The United States is eliminated from political arrangements in Europe, but ready to co-operate for disarmament and lowering trade barriers.

No discussion of permanent and world-wide currency stabilization now seems feasible because of conditions abroad.

Ultimate Aim of New Deal To Be Explored By Congress

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.

It is not only evident in public opinion, but it is evident in the widening division between the two camps and two types of thought in the administration itself.

It is even evident to the President.

There is a good chance still remaining for him to make it clear in his message to Congress that he observes the distinction between the new deal in the sense that active, liberal steps to recovery mean a new deal and the other interpretation of the new deal which is that it means a wide departure in practice and even form of our political life.

ARE we being asked to pass up our traditions and perhaps the intention of our Constitution, on a permanent excursion into state socialism or government-made reorganization of our whole financial, economic and hence social life?

This Congress has had time to do some thinking since the springtime rush for relief legislation under the new deal slogan.

In its new intelligence it probably will say, "Hold on here! There are two objectives and two groups forming under the President to cheer for one or the other.

There are two R's—one is Recovery and the other Revolution. No matter whether the country wants one or both, isn't it time for the country to have some light on the distinctions between the two? Isn't it time especially to ask how far completed is the thing which Tugwell and those other heavy thinkers have been planning? And what is it?

Not that there is similarity between the new deal and Fascism or Hitlerism, but because in all plans followers must know where leaders are going.

It is worth while to point out that objectives were well defined in the revolutions in Europe which made Mussolini and Kemal Pasha and Hitler. These revolutions took their strength, not from mystery, but from disclosure and the approval of the masses.

HENCE the time is nearly at hand when the country through Congress has the right to ask for clear differentiation between plans meant to tide us over a depression which is obviously, and like all other depressions, wearing itself out, and plans to create permanently some kind of a new national machinery to reach out into our lives for good or ill with an iron hand and to give at the same moment a soft laugh to "old-fashioned, rugged individualism."

There is no political partisanship in such a claim to see the map which the "revolutionists" in the administration forces have drawn for our projected journey. There will be no partisan malice when this Congress asks about legislative or administrative steps:

"What is this? Recovery or revolution?"

After all, if we are to leave permanently and not for mere emergency needs, our social and economic and constitutional structure, let us take the jump and not be backed out of our stalls blindfolded. This has begun to be the sentiment of the wiser, more observant, more thoughtful members of this Congress on the threshold of the new session.

CERTAINLY those who favor "revolution"—and this is the brave term of the advocates of whatever it is—must see that disclosure is needed to bring it about. Certainly those more conservative who wish to combat it have the right to demand fair play and courage from those who want "revolution."

Certainly the President will heartily agree with both these statements.

Questions which this Congress ought to ask as to all pieces of legislation, not only of this session but of the last session, are these:

Is this an emergency recovery measure, intended to help us out of our hole and to be revoked when the job is done?

Or is this designed as a permanent prop for a planned social and economic revolution?

'OLD ORDER' DEFIED BY PRESIDENT

Nation's Chief Appears Before New Congress

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3. —(AP.)—The Seventy-third Congress today resumed its tasks with a personal address by President Roosevelt, asserting the nation is "in the process of recovery" and evincing his determination to cleave to the emergency program

Specific recommendations he withheld at this time, but left no doubt that he considers the NRA a permanent, constructive achievement and plans to follow his current relief and civil works policies.

GRIPS DESK

Gripping the desk at which he stood before the thronged Hosse of Representatives, the President defied advocates of "a return to old methods," excoriated wrongdoers of the banking and financial worlds in calling for regulatory legislation and spoke of "permanent readjustment" of many social and economic arrangements.

His audience comprised the entire membership of Senate and House, members of his cabinet and the front rank of official, diplomatic and social Washington that splashed the galleries with brilliant and formal dress.

Crisply, he recounted his gold and silver buying policy and said there was no present prospect of world currency stabilization. Before proceeding to the Capitol, he had let it be known that he now sees no chance for early international money action for some time.

LATER MESSAGES

In later messages he will transmit recommendations, including

CAPTORS TO CUT GIRL'S TONGUE

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — Marie Lambert, 18, missing Bronx girl, will be returned in 24 hours—with her tongue cut out.

Mrs. Anna Lambert, mother of the girl who "knew too much," revealed today that a mysterious voice, the same voice that has transmitted other threats, had served that ghastly notice on her.

Reporters found Mrs. Lambert huddled in terror on the stairway of her home, a snarling police dog beside her for protection. She cried:

"Stay where you are. This dog is unleashed. I'm taking no chances."

She then told of the latest telephone message from the supposed captor of Marie, a dancer, who was freed recently under bond on a charge of aiding an escaped prisoner from the Tombs. She quoted the man as saying:

"You notified the police when we told you not to. We will return your daughter in 24 hours with her tongue cut out."

Mrs. Lambert notified police of Marie's disappearance Tuesday, after not having seen her daughter since 2 p. m. Friday.

Rackets Close as Police War on Vice

Underworld Wary as Marshall Orders Vigorous Drive

Pittsburgh's racket guys today were wondering what it is all about.

An eye on the City-County Building, an ear to the ground, they are mumbling prayers of a sort that the uncertainty of the last week comes to a quick end.

They've been closed, for the most part, since the last two days of Mayor Herron's administration—the speakeasies, the gambling clubs, the horse rooms.

The racket guys are anxious to know how they stand with the new powers that be. Until then they will not operate with the same confidence they have had for quite a few years.

Meanwhile, newly appointed Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall today announced he would make every effort to give the people a "100 per cent clean city."

His first order, directed to police captains, instructed them to arrest all racketeers, proprietors of speakeasies, disorderly houses and all those engaged in unlawful activities. He said:

"Crime and racketeering must go. If my men are not capable of cleaning up the city and keeping it clean of crime and racketeering, they have no business in the police bureau and should resign."

Some of the guys in the numbers racket, which is a modern version of the old carnival shell game, are reported to have moved their headquarters to nearby boroughs, lacking confidence in the new administration. However, their agents may continue to pay their daily calls on the gullible.

'Speaks,' Gambling Places Shut in Uncertainty

Many of the speakeasies, blessed with ancient charters, ignored the word to close that went out just before the new administration came in. They feel they are respectable, now.

However, all removed their slot machines. And the machines will stay out until the guys find out what's what.

The resignation of Police Capt. John Barry, of the Oakland district, has been received by Chester Morley, secretary of the Police Pension Fund, he announced late yesterday. Barry has been on the force 21 years. He was once captain of detectives and on the dismissal of former Inspector James N. Hoey in Oakland was named to succeed him.

JOHNSTON CONFIRMED AS WORKS DIRECTOR BY COUNCIL

M'NAIR'S FIRST MAJOR CHOICE APPROVED

discussing patronage, as has been suggested. . . . We are more interested in seeing these departments conducted in the best interests of the people . . .

"While it was impossible for us to meet with the Mayor or with Mr. Johnston, we are willing to approve the appointment in order that the department may start functioning as soon as possible."

MAGEE GOES ALONG

Councilman William A. Magee, former Mayor who has been criticized by the new Mayor, joined in the confirmation.

Thus one issue was settled. Whether the Mayor will send Malone's name along for confirmation remains to be seen.

A few minutes after he was confirmed, Johnston was sworn in by the Mayor. Johnston replaced Edward G. Lang, originally appointed by the late Mayor Kline.

Before he swore in Johnston, McNair told the Sun-Telegraph that the retention of Col. W. R. Dunlap as supplies director was only temporary. Dunlap was appointed by the late Mayor Kline to succeed Col. B. L. Succop.

From the Mayor's office the news trail today led to the office of Public Safety Director Harmar D. Denny, Jr., another Republican, who is being retained temporarily.

SPONSOR FOR MARSHALL

Denny issued a statement in which he said that it was he—nobody else—who had caused the appointment of Ben Marshall—also an original Republican appointee—as police superintendent, succeeding Franklin T. McQuaide.

Denny said, that so far as he was concerned, this was a permanent appointment.

Certainly this was an unusual situation—a Republican hold-over naming the police superintendent for the Democrats.

M'NAIR VIEWS

Denny's statement:

"I selected and appointed Marshall because I knew that he is the best man qualified. This is in line with the policy of Mayor McNair thaht heads of the departments shall have absolute authority without dictation from anyone."

All of which formed a prologue to yesterday's exciting thriller, when the Democratic Council bloc and Lawrence, the county chairman, tried and tried again to confer with McNair.

They tried yesterday, even obtaining a recess of Council that they might have a conference.

McNair was willing to confer—in open Council. But when they insisted on meeting with him privately, he announced:

"I desire to state that there will be no conference."

Even after that slap in the faces of McNair's colleagues, whom he praised and who praised him so lavishly in the recent campaign, Lawrence patiently tried to see McNair.

Lawrence sat fuming futilely in the Mayor's office while McNair attended a meeting of the prison board and held various conferences with his three new magistrates and Southard Hay, his new director of welfare, in other offices.

COUNCIL IMPATIENT

The only ear Lawrence could catch was that of P. R. Williams, McNair's secretary and chief assessor. And even Williams was wringing his hands in confusion.

Meanwhile, as McNair disported himself with whims changing from autocracy to simple democracy and blew hot and cold with rapidity similar to that characterizing his first day in office, Monday, Council and the city grew impatient for completion of the new administration.

The two most important cabinet positions were yet to be filled or agreed upon. No name was heard as a substitute for Malone's if his is thrown out.

Council did confirm one appointment, that of Hay as Welfare Director.

A magistracy is still to be filled. A. D. Brandon's name having been withdrawn by McNair after its presentation yesterday.

There were hundreds of minor positions to be filled with no machinery—other than the fragile machinery set up when McNair decided to hold court in open cabinet meetings—for their filling yet devised.

BUDGET AWAITS ACTION

There was the new city budget to be attended to, with the city spending at last year's rate until it is settled.

And McNair, meanwhile, was Neroesquely fiddling with his lobby desk and his spats with bewildered newspapermen and his single tax.

Vital, pressing city business waiting as the Mayor romped in his new domain focussed such tremendous attention on the unprecedented chaos in City-County Building that another record crowd was expected to attend the Council meeting this afternoon.

Yesterday saw the gathering of crowds unprecedented in City Council's history.

They sat on chairs and stood in aisles booing and cheering, as they saw McNair feud with Kane and Gallagher over Johnston's and Malone's appointment.

PUZZLED BY MAGEE VOTE

They cheered wildly as Kane made a speech condemning "conferences held in the sanctuaries of the rich."

They were puzzled as Councilman William A. Magee cast his vote with those of the four Democrats and Republican William J. Soost to defer consideration of Johnston's name until today—over McNair's objection.

They saw the same Council into which McNair strode Monday to take the reins and ignore President Robert Garland as he bossed the body warn McNair that he can't have another recess in which to wind himself up for another tilt with the legislative body.

They wondered what it was all about when Demmler asked that the name of A. D. Brandon, whom McNair wanted as a magistrate, be deferred from confirmation consideration, after four others were confirmed.

Other crowds disporting themselves in the Mayor's office noticed the absence of Charles F. Papale, approved as a magistrate, when the appointees were sworn in. Papale didn't want the job, having his eyes on another, more important position in the Public Works Department.

CLASHES WITH KANE

But today Papale changed his mind and was sworn in.

The sensation of the day, however, was the clash between McNair and Kane.

Asking for confirmation of Johnston, a leader in the Citizens' League, whose appointment is credited to the influence of Benedum, also responsible for the projected appointment of Malone, McNair opposed delay in consideration.

But Kane, explaining he had no personal feud with Johnston, said:

"I object to the manner in which some of these selections were made.

"I am not going to be satisfied with conferences held in the Duquesne Club and the sanctuaries of the rich.

"We're not fighting Mr. Johnston, but another appointment (Malone's) which, if made, would be an attempt by one rich man (Benedum) to take over the control of affairs, replacing another rich man that the people defeated on November 7."

ANDERSON BOOED

And the second rich man was understood by everyone to be W. L. Mellon, Republican leader.

So Councilman Charles Anderson came to the defense of the Mayor and the oilman, saying:

Anderson, a Republican, was roundly booed in his defense of the Democratic Mayor and the Democratic financier who have turned to Republican supporters and threaten a complete breakup of the reborn Democratic party.

But the Democrats and Magee and Soost voted against consideration of the Johnston appointment and the meeting recessed while the Democrats sought parley wtih the wandering Mayor.

The magistrates named yesterday were Ralph E. Smith, Howard B. McNutt, Papale and Charles J. McCall.

Smith presided in Morals Court and No. 1 Police Court today, McCall was at No. 2 and McNutt at No. 7, South Side. Papale is expected to take Stations Nos. 6 and 11—East Liberty and Squirrel Hill—but J. Scott Morgan, of the Republican regime, was on the bench at No. 6 this morning. Thomas D. Jones, former Morals Court magistrate, presided at No. 12, North Side.

Papale was assigned to Stations Nos. 6 and 11—East Liberty and Squirrel Hill.

Brandon is understood to have been neglected, although confirmation is regarded as certain, because of his former close affiliation with Malone and Benedum. His faithfulness to the Lawrence-Guffey faction during the campaign, however, made his confirmation probable, if McNair resubmits his name.

SMITH RESUMES AS MAGISTRATE

It was like putting on an old shoe for Ralph E. Smith, newly-appointed magistrate for Central Police Court, when he took the bench vacated by Leo Rothenberg today. Twelve years ago Smith ended a four-year term as magistrate in the administration of William A. Magee.

The first defendant to face Magistrate Smith was Charles Lloyd, 32, no home, a World War veteran, charged with drunkenness. The magistrate told him:

"Charlie, inasmuch as you have no home, I'll send you up to jail for 10 days to rest up and keep out of the cold."

Smith also was assigned to hold hearings in Morals Court. He announced he would place a censorship on news photographs in that court, especially of minors and of those involved in domestic difficulties.

In Morals Court, where he succeeded Thomas D. Jones, Magistrate Smith disposed of six family cases by turning them over to social workers.

NcNair Tells 5,000 To Try to Collect Overdue Taxes

of the Legislature, authorizing the City Treasurer to eliminate the penalty and interest on delinquent taxes.

Ordinarily the 5,000 would have been paid on Saturday. The day passed with no warrants being issued by City Paymaster Louis Glesenkamp. Yesterday the employes felt their warrants would be forthcoming. There was no pay.

Today Glesenkamp said:

"I have received no orders to pay today. It has been delayed. It seems there is no money."

James Kirk, the new City Treasurer, said:

"I don't know anything about the payroll. That originates in the Controller's office. We merely pay out the money to cash the warrants."

DENIES SEEKING TAXES

Kirk denied a report that he was sending out letters to large taxpayers urging them to pay their current taxes at once to relieve the present stringency. January is the "big money" month for collection of taxes, as the taxpayers receive a 2 per cent discount if the entire year's taxes or first quarterly installment are paid in the first month of the year. However, most large property owners withheld payment until the last of the month to save interest on bank balances.

Mayor McNair met the complaining delegation from the health department in the dance permit office, which is part of his suite. He discussed with them the advisability of obtaining their pay warrants and asking delinquent taxpayers to cash them.

McNair told the delegation:

"I suggest that you and other city employes take your pay warrants and ask some citizen who is behind in payment of taxes to cash them. Tell them you are giving service. If there was no health protection everybody would move out of Pittsburgh.

"Some men might say they don't need to pay taxes. You say 'I'll tell the mayor and he'll send somebody to collect the rent. Somebody's holding out.'"

TAX PAYERS' PLEA

A middle aged man who had drifted into the meeting interjected:

"I'm not working mayor and can't pay any taxes. What can I do?"

McNair stared at the man. Then he asked:

"No."

The Mayor added:

"If you don't like to do this, say so and I'll drop it. I'm going to collect my own warrant, and, believe me, I'll put up a swell sales talk. You can get the delinquent tax list in the newspapers."

Later, at his first press conference, the Mayor said he intended to appoint a committee of one from each department to cooperate in collecting delinquent taxes. He said:

Brookline Man, 60, Falls Dead in Street

George Walker, 60, of 314 Aidyl avenue, Brookline, collapsed in the street near his home last night. He was pronounced dead of a heart ailment, according to a morgue report.

M'NAIR JOKES, GIVES NO JOBS TO POOR

Pleas of Needy Work Hunters to Mayor in Lobby Unheeded

bility of a job, but not until after 300 men had been placed.

LANG EMBARRASSED

The other job-seekers the Mayor instructed to follow retiring Public Works Director Edward G. Lang, who dropped around to say hello.

They followed the embarrassed Lang to his office. There he told the visitors to apply for jobs in writing. Leaving office this week to make way for a McNair appointee, Lang gave none assurance of work.

Later, in his office, the Mayor held his first conference with the press. He said that last night Mrs. McNair, attending a meeting of the Fourteenth Ward Voters League, had heard the new director of the Pittsburgh Housing Association assert that Dr. Ray P. Moyer, the Mayor's director of health, was unfitted for the post. McNair resented:

"I'm going to inquire into that man. The Welfare Fund pays him, I understand. Whatever he gets it's twice too much. How can he criticize members of my cabinet when they haven't had a chance to get started? I'll debate with him on housing any time."

Joseph P. Tufts, director of the Housing Association, spoke last night at the meeting referred to, but he explained today that, far from criticizing the new health director, he had urged the public to support him.

INVITES CROWD

Shortly before noon, the Mayor appeared from his inner sanctum, and met the crowd milling about his outer office and reception room.

He was eating an apple, and had another in his left hand as a follow up. He said:

"What are all these people doing here? Maybe they want to see my office?"

He told his secretary to open the door into his office and addressed the throng:

"Get in line there. Go in and see the rug. (Former Mayor Kline's $2,000 rug.) Maybe that will keep them from crowding around the door."

An old Italian, presumably a huckster, hesitantly halted and tried to talk with McNair, who asked:

"What do you want? Don't you want to see my office?"

The man answered:

"I want a job."

"Oh, I don't have anything to do with that. You go down to the fourth floor and see the Department of Public Safety (which is on the second floor)."

DODGES CAMERA

McNair gave the unused apple to someone in the crowd.

He turned to the newspapermen, waved to the throng and said:

"What do you want to pay a dollar for a dance for? Did you ever hear of anything like that?"

The throng smiled knowingly. But it is difficult to know what he meant.

M'NAIR OUSTS REPORTERS

Mayor William N. McNair completed a busy day yesterday by again putting newspaper reporters out of his office.

This gesture carried an added sting since the scribes were ordered forth from the outer office, a sort of semi-public place where in past administrations even the most lowly might stay so long as they liked.

George P. Jordan, of the Twenty-sixth Ward, was put out even more peremptorily a few moments before. McNair after suggesting that the chairman see him at his regular lobby office hours, became angry when the latter persistently sought a private appointment and ended by saying:

"There's the door."

He then noted two reporters who were waiting for the announcement of assignments of new police magistrates.

He said curtly:

"I thought I ordered these rooms cleared. Now, you are back again. You will have to leave."

After some further remarks about closing his office promptly at 4 p. m., the Mayor went back into conference with the new magistrates and the reporters adjourned to the hallway.

Pinchot Unlikely Smith Fete Guest

HARRISBURG, Jan. 3.—Gov. Pinchot is not expected to attend the dinner for Judge Ralph H. Smith in Pittsburgh next Monday night. While attaches of the executive offices said the Governor is "improved" at the New York hospital where he is receiving treatment, they expressed doubt that he will be able to make the trip.

Mrs. Pinchot has accepted an invitation to the Smith dinner. Duncan McCallum, secretary to the Governor, also may attend.

Fire Heroine

MISS MARY F. MORGAN

PRINCIPAL FIRE HEROINE

Because of the heroism of Miss Mary Florence Morgan, 26, principal of the Bessemer avenue grade school, East Pittsburgh, more than 575 pupils and the records of the school are safe today.

When fire broke out in the basement of the two-story brick building late yesterday, Miss Morgan rang the fire bell and, with the aid of teachers, saw that the children both in her building and the portable wooden annex, on Electric avenue, were marched to safety. She then re-entered the flaming building and saved the school's records.

Fireman George Bristel was injured when struck by a falling board. Members of the school board announced that pupils will be given a holiday until next Monday, pending repairs and an investigation.

IL DUCE, SIMON MEET ON ARMS

ROME, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Premier Mussolini and Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, met today in Venezia Palace for a long conference on international disarmament and reformation of the League of Nations.

Meanwhile the Chamber of Deputies considered a navy budget report which declared that only a four-power pact can save the world from a naval armaments race of the worst kind.

The report, signed by Marquis Giacomo Medici del Vascello, committee reporter, and accepted as a statement of Il Duce's own viewpoint, warned that the principal world powers "are already arming at sea."

Citing particularly the naval building programs of America, England and Japan, the report placed blame for the heavy arming on Japan's idea of her "world mission."

Real Estate Owners Ask Special Session

Gov. Pinchot has been asked by the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League to call a special session of the Legislature to consider an income or sales tax for school purposes, and taxation upon real property of public utilities now exempt.

The league also proposes legislation providing for the consolidation of school districts, consolidation of tax assessing, levying and collecting bodies and elimination of all fee offices in Allegheny County.

LEHMAN FIGHTS BURDEN OF OLD GOVERNMENT

N. Y. Executive Calls For Local Reforms To Slash Taxes

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Gov. Lehman today asked the Legislature to give the people of New York lower taxes through a tremendous program of "modernizing" the government of their cities, towns, villages and counties.

Such reorganization, the Governor declared, not only will cut heavily into tax bills, but will deal a blow to "invisible government." The Governor also called for:

"Bold experimentation" in liquor control laws.

Laws to permit cities and villages to sell electricity, breaking the monopoly of power companies.

Immediate enactment of a system to insure New Yorkers against loss of their jobs.

Authority to cities to build low-cost homes with federal funds.

Reform of public utility laws, and strengthening of the milk control law.

A four-year term for Governor and reapportionment of the legislative and congressional districts.

By far the greater part of the Executive's 7,500 word message was devoted to a three-fold program of governmental reform. In brief, he proposes to simplify all local governments just as the state govenrment was simplified during the administration of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

The tree-fold program is:

1—Reorganization of county and town government.

2—Revision of city charters generally throughout the state.

The governor told the legislators:

"My recommendations, while very far-reaching and affecting every political subdivision of the state, insure in every instance to the people of the community involved the right to make the final decision as to the form of government which they desire."

Enactment of the three proposals, he said:

"Wil bring to every taxpayer in the state substantial reductions in local taxation."

NEW ASSESSORS TAKE OFFICE

Two Democratic chairmen have replaced Republican ward chairmen in the city assessor's office. Eight new assessors were confirmed by Council after their names were offered yesterday by Mayor William N. McNair.

Among the new appointments are John J. Murray, Democratic city chairman, and William Fromm, Democratic chairman of the Sixteenth Ward.

FORD'S BROTHER BANKRUPT

Universal Service.

DETROIT, Jan. 3.—Henry Ford's brother, William, disclosed that he was bankrupt and asked that he be adjudged so in a petition on file in Federal Court here.

The former president of the William Ford & Co. tractor and implement firm, Ford listed liabilities of $412,900. His home in Dearborn, other real estate held jointly by himself and wife, and a few shares of stock were the only assets listed. No value was placed on them.

The petition was filed December 12, and the Union Guardian Trust Company was named trustee yesterday by Referee Paul H. King in United States Bankruptcy Court.

Most of the liabilities were obligations of the tractor company which Ford has personally assumed.

Wife Aided in Divorce By Mother-in-Law

A mother-in-law spoke a good word in behalf of her son's wife today as the latter sought a divorce before Judge Harry H. Rowand.

A bundle of 25 love letters also was introduced in evidence. Mrs. Martha M. Wagner, 23, of Noblestown, charged they were received by her husband, John H. Wagner, 24, bank employe, from another woman, and asked the court to grant her a divorce.

Wagner's mother, Mrs. Ruth Wagner, told the court her daughter-in-law was a good wife.

The younger Mrs. Wagner testified many letters were written to her husband by the other woman, whom she did not know, and the 25 introduced in evidence was only a portion of them. Others were taken from her by her husband and burned, she said.

Attorney George P. Murray, counsel for the wife, said the other woman was a member of a good family, and her name was not disclosed. Mrs. Wagner said her husband admitted he loved another. She said:

"He told me there was another woman in his life and he wanted to know why I didn't get a divorce because he was not going to live with me."

They were married November 7, 1930.

Death of Archeologist Recalls 'Tut' Curse

International News Service.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The fatal "curse of Tutankhamen" was recalled today in the death of Arthur Weigall, 53, famous Egyptologist, under mysterious circumstances.

The "curse" was that anyone connected, directly or indirectly, with the opening of the tomb of the famous old Egyptian king would die mysteriously.

Weigall was present at the opening of the tomb, and was active in the famous archeological expedition of more than 10 years ago, regarding his death in a London hospital, a friend said today:

"He had been ill for about six months, but the exact cause of his death seems a mystery."

Although many scoffed at the "curse of Tutankhamen," Weigall was not among them. He often had remarked that one of the dead queens of Egypt still had remarkable powers.

The death of Weigall, whose first wife was the former Hortense Schleiter, of Chicago, recalled those of other men connected with the unearthing of Tutankhamen's tomb. Lord Carnarvon, sponsor of the expedition, died in 1923. Reginald L. Wendell, brother-in-law of Lord Carnarvon, died in 1928 at the age of 29.

In addition to noted work on the archeology of Egypt, Weigall was author of many works of fiction.

36 DEAD, 75 MISSING IN CALIFORNIA FLOOD CHAOS

ARMY OF 7,000 SEARCHING FOR BODIES

Death Toll Expected To Rise; Property Loss 5 Millions

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Searching for victims and rehabilitating stricken areas, an army of 7,000 men was organized today to bring order out of the chaos created by the New Years Day flood here.

A death list of 36 and a report of 75 persons missing was before city and county officials. All but three of the dead had been identified. Forty-nine persons were reported seriously injured.

Conservative estimates predicted a final death list around 50. Officials believed most of the persons listed as missing were among the homeless being taken care of by relief agencies and had not had an opportunity to report their escape.

FIVE MILLION DAMAGE

Damage estimates ranged around five million dollars, the principal loss being confined to the Glendale-Montrose area, where the flood originated, roaring down Pickens Canyon and demolishing about 300 residences, some of them costly homes.

In the Venice district, near the ocean, some 30 miles from the Glendale-Montrose area, between 1,500 and 2,000 homes were damaged extensively by partial inundation when the torrents leaped the banks of flood channels.

The sun and clear skies aided workmen yesterday as civic and governmental organizations joined in efforts to provide for the homeless, protect inhabitants of the flooded districts from the threat of disease, reopen highways, construct emergency bridges and restore rail traffic.

RAIN RECORDS BROKEN

Rainfall in Los Angeles totaled 8.27 inches during the storm, which began late last Saturday, continuing through New Years Day. It was a cloudburst which started the flood, 18 inches of rain falling in some of the mountain districts surrounding Glendale-Montrose. The precipitation broke Southern California records.

Led by sheriff's deputies and state highway patrolmen, groups of CWA workers patrolled the banks of rivers looking for victims. Others dug into the piles of debris in search of other bodies. Others hunted through wrecked houses, many of the structures moved hundreds of feet off foundations, for the dead.

Gov. James Rolph, Jr., flew here to aid relief work.

D. C. McWatters, chief of the American Red Cross here, issued an appeal for funds. City Engineer Lloyd Aldrich said immediate application would be made to the federal government for $1,500,000 for rehabilitation.

HEIRESS QUITS EX-DRIVER

International News Service.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 3.—Mrs. Katrina Canning today resumed her maiden name, Katrina Pusey, as the result of a preliminary decree of divorce from her millionare husband, Theodore W. Canning. She won the decree on grounds of desertion.

Difficulties besetting the marriage of Canning, who began his business career as a laundry wagon driver, to Miss Pusey, daughter of a wealthy coal dealer, first were revealed last summer. At that time Mrs. Canning filed a $50,000 alienation of affections suit against Miss Ann Sharer, an heiress, of Alliance, O. The suit was settled out of court.

Canning met Miss Sharer aboard a ship bound for Europe. When he returned from the voyage he filed suit for divorce in Reno, Nev., but never pressed the action.

WRITER SUING THAW FOR PAY

WINCHESTER, Va., Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Suit has been filed in Frederick County Circuit Court by Edwin N. Williams, said to be a New York and Pittsburgh biographer, against Harry K. Thaw, asking judgment of $200 he charges Thaw owes him under a contract by which he was to write Thaw's biography.

The notice of motion for judgment said that Thaw retained Williams to write the story of his life, from infancy in Pittsburgh up to the present time.

Williams charged the contract with Thaw called for a salary of $100 per week until the biography was completed. Williams said he started work last October 2, and had been performing his duties regularly ever since, but that he had been paid only $400.

BANS 3 WOMEN IN STORES HERE

Three Beaver women today were paroled for 18 months after they pleaded guilty to shoplifting. Judge Sylvester J. Snee in Criminal Court made a provision of the parole that the women must not shop in Pittsburgh during the time of their parole and told them to restrict their shopping to Beaver, where they are known.

The paroled women are Mrs. Alma Lambert, 195 Buffalo street, Beaver; her daughter, Miss Helen Lambert, 19, a music teacher, and Mrs. Dorothy Reeder, 34, 1236 Third street, all of Beaver. A number of Beaver residents testified as to the women's previous good characters.

The women stole stockings and underwear from one store December 15, it was testified, and were trailed by detectives to two other stores, where they stole other articles.

McCormick Luxuries Sold Under Hammer

Auction Draws Crowd Of Manhattan Socialites

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—A fur-coated audience, with lorgnettes and lapdogs, crowded the auction rooms yesterday where the belongings of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick were going under the hammer.

Among them were Mrs. McCormick's daughter, Muriel, now Mrs. Elisha Dyer Hubbard, who bought up most of her mother's table silver, and Mrs. McCormick's sister, Mrs. Parmelee Prentice, who bought nothing.

Elaborate porcelains, gilded silver finger bowls, gold-plated dessert plates and other luxuries of the red-plush era were brought, one by one, to a red velvet stage, and the eager Park avenue crowd snapped them up.

"You can't make any money, here. Too much family."

Decorating the walls of the auction room were the lace-trimmed bed sheets, which will be auctioned off later in the week, and in an outer room was a four-poster bed that looked as though it had been designed for a stage setting.

Snickers came from spectators at one piece, put up for sale—a huge porcelain punch bowl with fittings for electric lights. It was too Victorian for the taste of today, but someone bought it for $60.

David Warfield, the actor, paid $100 for a gilded silver soup tureen.

Others in the crowd included Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, who looked on but did not buy; Mrs. Walter Chrysler and Walter Chrysler, Jr.; Mrs. William Douglas, Mrs. Charles Whiting, Mrs. J. J. Carlisle and Mrs. A. V. Stout.

One of the high spots of the sale will be a silver service originally owned by Pauline Bonaparte, sister of Napoleon. This will be sold later in the week, as will the lavish collection of lace, the antique furniture, the jewels, the sable coats and the Persian rugs.

M'KNIGHT FINED IN AUTO CRASH

Felix McKnight, 34, of 302 Coltart square, son of the late "Paddy" McKnight, Soho political leader, was fined $10 in Traffic Court today for reckless driving.

He told Magistrate J. Scott Morgan he didn't know Penn avenue, east of Sixth street, was a one-way street, although he said he was born and reared in Pittsburgh.

In addition to the fine, Morgan handed McKnight 10 parking tags which, Morgan said, had accumulated. McKnight promised to pay for them at the rate of $2 or $3 a week, explaining that he hasn't worked for more than a year.

McKnight was given a hearing as the result of an early morning auto collision at Sixth and Penn, when his car and one driven by William Pappas, 1200 Kelton avenue, Dormont, collided. McKnight and Miss Billie Conner, 30, of 926 Beech avenue, were taken to the Allegheny General Hospital for treatment.

Heart Attack Kills Scranton Prelate, 44

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Monsignor Paul A. Kelly, rector of St. Peter's Catholic Church and vicar general of the Scranton Diocese, died today in Providence Hospital, Washington. He was 44. Death was due to a heart attack.

RARE VAN DYCK CANVAS BURNS

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—A portrait said by its owner to be one of the three celebrated originals of "The Angels' Choir," attributed to the famous Flemish master, Van Dyck, was destroyed by fire which damaged a private art collection here, it was revealed today.

Survey of damage by the blaze yesterday in the home of John Gleeson, Ottawa businessman, disclosed that in addition to the reputed Van Dyck, several other paintings and prized treasures were burned or damaged. The loss was estimated at more than $300,000.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Destruction by fire in Ottawa of the painting, "The Angels' Choir," ascribed to Van Dyck, recalled here today the disappearance four years ago of a canvas on the same subject, also credited to the Flemish artist.

M. Bechbache, Belgian owner of the painting, had packed it and sent it to Godfrey Phillips, a London art dealer. On opening the packing case, however, Phillips found the canvas had been cut from the frame.

Wooden Leg Aids Bandits Make Escape

They had just held up the People's Currency Exchange, escaping with $1,000. Police fired at the fleeing men. Said Policeman Miller:

"We were chasing these three guys, when we saw a chap limping. We naturally think he's one of the robbers wounded by our gunfire. But we find an honest citizen limping from a wooden leg."

The three bandits got away.

FATHER FIGHTS FIANCEE OVER VET'S WILL

Deathbed Document Leaving $7,000 Faces Court Test

A court contest to determine whether the sweetheart or the father of Clifford T. Robbins, 42, World War veteran of Frazier Township, shall inherit his $7,000 estate loomed today.

Emerson Hazlett, attorney for Mrs. Nettie Rae, Robbins' fiancee, to whom he was to have been married the day of his death, and to whom his unsigned will bequeaths the money, conferred today with Deputy Coroner James L. Davison. Previously the father, Samuel T. Robbins, of Harwick, had asserted that he would contest the death-bed will.

He also claimed his son's body, blocking plans by Mrs. Rae to bury Robbins from her home.

Hazlett explains that although Mrs. Rae wasn't present when the will was written, that other witnesses, members of the Goepfert family, in whose house Robbins died, had seen him write it.

Hazlett says he will call on the Coroner to produce the paper for probate. It reads:

"Everything to Nettie. Everything to Mrs. Rae."

The father, 67, said he had not seen his son for several months, and learned of the $7,000, which the son received Saturday from an uncle, only after his son's death.

EXHUME BODY IN SPY PROBE

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—A secret service investigation of an alleged poison-spy plot led to a cemetery today.

There investigators supervised the disinterring of the body of Lieut.-Col. Fritz Walter Asplund, director of a government munitions plant, who authorities say was poisoned last spring.

Experts hoped, through an examination of the body, to learn something which might aid in the investigation of eight reputed poisonings—three of which resulted fatally.

Jenny Anttila, a young servant girl, said by authorities to have confessed poisoning Asplund, was guarded closely today in the fear attempts might be made to lynch her.

Investigators said the poisoning was part of a plot to murder all of Finland's leading army technical officers.

Newspapers credited the investigators with finding new angles believed to connect the alleged espionage ring in Finland with that recently declared by French police to have been uncovered in France.

Woman, 92, Flies Despite Orders From Son

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Mrs. Mary MacKnight, of Newark, N. J., who will be 92 years old in a few months, stepped from a plane at the East Boston airport yesterday, chuckling over the fact she had disobeyed the orders of her son that she travel by rail and not by air.

She came to visit her son, John MacKnight, of Belmont, who had written to her telling her not to fly. Just before she left Newark she sent him a wire telling him to meet her at the airport. She said:

EXTORTIONISTS THREATEN BANKER

By THOMAS F. CULLEN
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Widespread growth of the "extortion racket" became increasingly evident today with the revelation that Hugh Knowlton, prominent member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., four days ago received a demand for $10,000 with a threat to kidnap his children if he failed to meet the terms set forth in the letter.

It became known today that J. Edgar Hoover, director of the division of investigation, Department of Justice, under whose supervision the government has been conducting its successful campaign against kidnaping and extortion, is directing the investigation of this case.

HOME GUARDED

Knowlton was instructed by the anonymous writer of the demand to place a blue ribbon in the window of his home to signify his intention of obeying the extortionist's directions.

Rather than follow the terms of the note, Knowlton, who is a police justice of the village of King's Point, L. I., and a former first lieutenant in the American Expeditionary Force, notified Hoover, who in turn placed federal agents on the case.

The New York police department was also informed of the matter and went to work on the case.

Acting on the advice of the investigators, he placed the blue ribbon in the window of his residence with the hope of causing the racketeers again to communicate with him.

In the meantime, the law officers have been prepared to close in on whomever makes an effort to collect the tribute demanded.

RACKET SPREAD SEEN

Knowlton, a member of the New York Bar, Harvard and Yale graduate, was formerly connected with the law firm of Appleton, Rice & Perrin, but left the practice of law in 1926 to take up a financial career, becoming vice president of the International Acceptance Bank.

He was associated as an officer and director of many companies until the beginning of last year when he accepted a partnership in Kuhn, Loeb & Co., resigning from his other activities.

Federal agents today reported no new developments in the Kenneth O'Brien extortion case upon which they are also working. O'Brien, son-in-law of Clarence H. Mackay, a few days ago received a demand for $5,000.

Over the past few days most of the agents of the division of investigation have been engaged on these cases.

Department of Justice agents believe that with the coming of repeal former bootleggers have turned to this new field.

one dealing with reciprocal tariff powers opposed by the Republican leadership.

While cheerful about American conditions, Mr. Roosevelt viewed the world situation less optimistically. His attitude was one of seeking counsel, "in order that without partisanship you and I may co-operate to continue the restoration of national well being" and "to build on the ruins of the past a new structure," He said in conclusion:

"We have ploughed the furrow and planted the good seed. The hard beginning is over."

For tomorrow he reserved the important message on the federal budget, with its huge and growing deficit.

DIN IN HOUSE

A half hour before time for the assembly, House members gathered on the floor of the chamber, shook hands and back slapped each other.

Representative Mary T. Norton (Dem.), of New Jersey, wearing a black silk dress and orchids on her left shoulder, sat with Mrs. Isabella Greenway (Dem.), of Arizona, present to take her oath of office.

At the other end of the Capitol, Vice President Garner called the Senate to order at the same time the House convened.

Senators Austin, Vermont, and Carey, Wyoming, announced the deaths of their colleagues, Senators Dale and Kendrick, and resolutions were adopted expressing the sorrow of the Senate.

The Vice President laid before the Senate a letter of resignation from former Senator Bratton, of New Mexico, who was appointed to the federal bench.

Senator Glass, of Virginia, presented the credentials of Senator Byrd, Democrat, elected in the fall to the unexpired term of former Senator Swanson.

The Senate recessed at 12:19 p. m., to proceed to the House.

The House applauded as Garner took his position beside Speaker Rainey.

A joint committee of the Senate and House was named to leave the chamber and escort the President in.

Robinson Asks Vets' Benefits Restored

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Presaging a fight over the Economy Act, two bills were prepared for introduction today by Senator Robinson (Rep.), of Indiana, to restore veterans' benefits in effect prior to passage of the act and to reinstate the basic pay of government employes, which has been cut 15 per cent.

Under the pay measure, the Vice President, Speaker of the House, members of the cabinet and Senators and Representatives would not benefit by restoration of the former pay.

Praise and Criticism Of Message Voiced

Republican Leader Fears Repeal of Constitution

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Comment on President Roosevelt's message to Congress today ran all the way from glowing praise by the Democrats to slight skepticism and mild criticism by the Republican regulars.

Typical comment follows:

Senator McNary, of Oregon, Republican leader of the Senate:

"It's the finest repeal of the Constitution I ever heard. It's the first declaration by a President of the United States in a message to Congress that molds the three functions of our government into a common purpose."

Speaker Rainey:

"The President's message is an inspiring document and correctly and in general terms sets out what has been accomplished and what will be accomplished in the future by the recovery program. It is typically Roosevelt ian in its brevity and directness."

Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic House leader:

"It is a brief but very comprehensive message and, as all expressions of the President, is clear and to the point. I regard it as a fair, splendid statement of what has been accomplished by the administration since his inauguration toward the restoration of prosperity, and points the way to the future."

BANK ROBBERS BURN CASHIER

WINNEBAGO, Minn., Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Four machine gun robbers raided the Blue Earth Valley National Bank, slugged two persons, one of whom was tortured with matches, kidnaped another and escaped with $1,000.

The robbers threatened to "bump off" the cashier and the assistant cashier, who were unable to open the safe, which was under time lock.

The gunmen broke into the bank during the night. Edward Arndt, cashier, was first burned about one ear with matches and then slugged into unconsciousness when he told the bandits:

"It is impossible for me to open the safe."

Ora Herrick, janitor, also was clubbed into insensibility.

Ira Babcock, assistant cashier, was forced to stand on the running board of the gunmen's automobile as they fled. He was released four blocks away.

Roosevelt Speaks Under 'Headlights'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt's address to Congress had to be made under what might be called headlights, instead of footlights.

LIST OF BILLS TO GO BEFORE CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Here is a partial list of legislation that probably will be enacted by the Seventy-third Congress before the close of its session:

A liquor tax bill, placing a levy of $2 a gallon on spirits, designed to raise more than 500 million dollars in revnue.

A general tax measure, revising the income tax law and tightening loopholes, estimated to produce 270 million dollars annually.

Authorization for continuation of the Reconstruction Corporation and the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Amendment of the basic acts under which the NRA and Agricultural Adjustment Administration were founded, and some revision of the Securities Act; and, possibly trade agreements without submitting each to the state for ratification.

Additional legislatiton probably to be debated, some of which is almost certain of enactment, includes:

Ratification of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty.

Revision of the existing banking legislation, including bank deposit guarantee provisions.

TARIFF URGED AGAINST DEBT DODGERS

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—A bill proposing triple tariff duties on all nations which have defaulted on their debts to the United States more than 10 per cent was introduced in the House today by Representative Knutson (Rep.), of Minnesota.

Attacking France in particular, Knutson declared Congress should take decisive action to force payment of the 11 thousand million dollars of debts owed this country.

Knutson said:

"At the signing of the Armistice France owed us 1,970 million dollars for cash advanced during the war. In 1926 this debt was funded. Four days following the Armistice, or on November 15, 1918, we made a cash advance of 40 million dollars, to be followed by 72 cash advances between that date and September 28, 1920, ranging in size from 5 million to 81 million. It is this money we are trying to collect, only to be greeted with a thumbing of the nose.

"France promised to pay the amounts postponed under the Hoover moratorium plan in 10 annual installments, the first of which she has just dishonored.

"Now she would step in and recapture our wine market by exporting to us something like 175 million bottles of champagne and great quantities of wines and liquors.

"Not if I can prevent it. If I had my way I would prohibit the issuance of passports to France until she had toed the mark. I would place an absolute embargo on her wines, liquers and all other products until she pays."

Bishop Cannon Asks New Dry Amendment

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—A constitutional amendment to empower Congress to regulate or prohibit traffic in intoxicating liquors was proposed today by Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

In an address before the National Temperance Council, the Southern Methodist churchmen advocated the immediate introduction in Congress of a resolution for this purpose.

'HIGH HAT' CALL SPURNED BY ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt waived the formality of personal notification of the convening of Congress today, and told leaders over the telephone he would be ready to deliver his annual message "in a few minutes."

In accordance with long standing custom both houses adopted resolutions shortly after they convened setting up a joint committee to notify the President that Congress was in session and ready to receive any communications he might want to deliver.

Usually in the past the formality has been carried out to the last letter, with the leaders riding down Pennsylvania avenue in high hats and other evidences of state, to notify the Chief Executive.

CALLED BY ROBINSON

This time, Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, called the President on the telephone and delivered the message, notifying other members of the committee their duties were performed. Robinson was asked:

"What did you say?"

Robinson smiled and said:

"I told him I had a great shock and surprise for him and to restrain himself. Then I said Congress was organized and ready to receive any communication he desired to make.

"He laughed and said he would be ready in a few minutes."

It was the first time since the administration of Calvin Coolidge that a President adopted the policy first revived by Woodrow Wilson of personally presenting messages to Congress.

GUARD POSTED

Police and secret service men were posted around the House wing of the Capitol Building today several hours before the convening.

Hours before time for the President to arrive hundreds of people had gathered in the lower corridors and outside the Capitol. All were seeking to get into the galleries, which were kept closed until shortly before noon.

Barricades were placed in corridors leading to the galleries. Only those having reserved seats were allowed to pass.

The House diplomatic gallery was filled long before the President arrived, but the diplomats were not in their colorful dress uniforms.

Half a dozen children who accompanied their member-parents walked up and down the aisles or sat in laps while the roll was called.

CROWD AT CAPITOL

President Roosevelt arrived outside the Capitol at 1:09 p. m., and left his automobile immediately. A crowd lined the south end of the plaza.

A crowd also thronged outside the White House gates and he waved as he passed en route to the Capitol.

Women Members Take Big Part In New Congress

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Members of the feminine bloc played a prominent part today as Congress convened. They included the newest members, Mrs. Isabella Greenway (Dem.), of Arizona, a warm friend of Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Greenway was elected during the recess. With her was her young son. Mrs. Greenway took the oath of office determined to support to the full the efforts of the administration to bring about recovery.

Attired in a simple, brown dress, Mrs. Greenway sat with Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Democratic congresswoman from New Jersey, during the opening ceremonies.

Mrs. Greenway took the oath with other new members, without special ceremony. She said:

"I hope to be as useful as I can. It is a great privilege to be allowed to participate in such times as these."

As Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was sighted by the floor and galleries when she entered at 1:25 p. m., applause rang through the chamber. She took her daughter, Mrs. Anna Curtis Dall, and the grandchildren, Sistie and Auzzie, to the executive gallery, and amused herself by pointing out celebrities to the children. The latter enjoyed the proceedings immensely.

Directly across the chamber sat Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, wife of the former speaker, dressed in blue. She watched the presidential gallery through a lorgnette.

Mrs. Longworth had a seat in the speaker's gallery. It was Mrs. Rainey's own seat, which she gave up to Mrs. Longworth when the latter was unable to obtain one elsewhere.

COMPLETE TEXT OF ROOSEVELT MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

PRESIDENT ASKS CONTINUANCE OF NEW DEAL

To the Congress:

I come before you at the opening of the regular session of the Seventy-third Congress, not to make requests for special or detailed items of legislation; I come, rather, to counsel with you, who, like myself, have been selected to carry out a mandate of the whole people, in order that without partisanship you and I may co-operate to continue the restoration of our national well-being and, equally important, to build on the ruins of the past a new structure designed better to meet the present problems of modern civilization.

Such a structure includes not only the relations of industry and agriculture and finance to each other, but also the effect which all of these three have on our individual citizens and on the whole people as a nation.

DEFINITE RECOVERY

Now that we are definitely in the process of recovery, lines have been rightly drawn between those to whom this recovery means a return to old methods—and the number of these people is small—and those for whom recovery means a reform of many old methods, a permanent readjustment of many of our ways of thinking and therefore of many of our social and economic arrangements.

Civilization cannot go back; civilization must not stand still.

We have undertaken new methods. It is our task to perfect, to improve, to alter when necessary, but in all cases to go forward. To consolidate what we are doing, to make our economic and social structure capable of dealing with modern life is the joint task of the legislative, the judicial and the executive branches of the national government.

Without regard to party, the overwhelming majority of our people seek a greater opportunity for humanity to prosper and find happiness.

They recognize that human welfare has not increased and does not increase through mere materialism and luxury, but that it does progress through integrity, unselfishness, responsibility and justice.

In the past few months, as a result of our action, we have demanded of many citizens that they surrender certain licenses to do as they pleased in their business relationships: but we have asked this in exchange for the protection which the state can give against exploitation by their fellow men or by combinations of their fellow men.

LAUDS CONGRESS

I congratulate this Congress upon the courage, the earnestness and the efficiency with which you met the crisis at the special session.

It was your fine understanding of the national problem that furnished the example which the country has so splendidly followed. I venture to say that the task confronting the first Congress of 1789 was no greater than your own.

I shall not attempt to set forth either the many phases of the crisis which we experienced last March, nor the many measures which you and I undertook during the special session that we might initiate recovery and reform.

It is sufficient that I should speak in broad terms of the results of our common counsel.

The credit of the government has been fortified by drastic reduction in the cost of its permanent agencies through the economy act.

With the two-fold purpose of strengthening the whole financial structure and of arriving eventually at a medium of exchange which will have over the years less variable purchasing and debt paying power for our people than that of the past, I have used the authority granted me to purchase all American produced gold and silver and to buy additional gold in the world markets.

Careful investigation and constant study prove that in the matter of foreign exchange rates, certain of our sister nations find themselves so handicapped by internal and other conditions that they feel unable at this time to enter into stabilization discussions based on permanent and world-wide objectives.

BANKING SOUNDNESS

The overwhelming majority of the banks, both national and state, which reopened last spring, are in sound condition and have been brought within the protection of federal insurance.

In the case of those banks which were not permitted to reopen, nearly 600 million dollars of frozen deposits are being restored to the depositors through the assistance of the national government.

We have made great strides towards the objectives of the National Industrial Recovery Act; for not only have several millions of our unemployed been restored to work, but industry is organizing itself with a greater understanding that reasonable profits can be earned while at the same time protection can be assured to guarantee to labor adequate pay and proper conditions of work.

Child labor is abolished. Uniform standards of hours and wages apply today to 95 per cent of industrial employment within the field of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

We seek the definite end of preventing combinations in furtherance of monopoly and in restraint of trade, while at the same time we seek to prevent ruinous rivalries within industrial groups which in many cases resemble the gang wars of the underworld and in which the real victim in every case is the public itself.

PERMANENT FEATURE

Under the authority of this Congress, we have brought the component parts of each industry together around a common table, just as we have brought problems affecting labor to a common meeting ground.

Though the machinery, hurriedly devised, may need readjustment from time to time, nevertheless I think you will agree with me that we have created a permanent feature of our modernized industrial structure and that it will continue under the supervision but not the arbitrary dictation of government itself.

You recognized last spring that the most serious part of the debt burden affected those who stood in danger of losing their farms and their homes. I am glad to tell you that refinancing in both of these cases is proceeding with good success and in all probability within the financial limits set by the Congress.

But agriculture had suffered from more than its debts. Actual experience with the operation of the Agricultural Adjustment Act leads to my belief that thus far the experiment of seeking a balance between production and consumption is succeeding and has made progress entirely in line with reasonable expectations towards the restoration of farm prices to parity.

I continue in my conviction that industrial progress and prosperity can only be attained by bringing the purchasing power of that portion of our population which in one form or another is dependent upon agriculture up to a level which will restore a proper balance between every section of the country and every form of work.

ELIMINATION OF WASTE

In this field, through carefully planned flood control, power development and land use policies, in the Tennessee Valley and in other great watersheds, we are seeking the elimination of waste, the removal of poor lands from agriculture and the encouragement of small local industries, thus furthering this principle of a better balanced national life.

We recognize the great ultimate cost of the application of this rounded policy to every part of the union.

Today we are creating heavy obligations to start the work and because of the great unemployment needs of the moment.

I look forward, however, to the time in the not distant future, when annual appropriations, wholly covered by current revenue, will enable the work to proceed with a national plan.

Such a national plan will, in a generation or two, return many times the money spent on it; more important, it will eliminate the use of inefficient tools, conserve and increase natural resources, prevent waste, and enable millions of our people to take better advantage of the opportunities which God has given our country.

WORLD AFFAIRS

I cannot, unfortunately, present to you a picture of complete optimism regarding world affairs.

The delegation representing the United States has worked in close co-operation with the other American republics assembled at Montevideo to make that conference an outstanding success.

We have, I hope, made it clear to our neighbors that we seek with them future avoidance of territorial expansion and of interference by one nation in the internal affairs of another. Furthermore, all of us are seeking the restoration of commerce in ways which will preclude the building up of large favorable trade balances by any one nation at the expense of trade debits on the part of other nations.

In other parts of the world, however, fear of immediate or future aggression, and with this the spending of vast sums on armament, and the continued building up of defensive trade barriers, prevent any great progress in peace or trade agreements.

I have made it clear that the United States cannot take part in political arrangements in Europe, but that we stand ready to co-operate at any time in practicable measures on a world basis looking to immediate reduction of armaments and the lowering of the barriers against commerce.

DEBT PROBLEM

I expect to report to you later in regard to debts owed the government and people of this country by the governments and peoples of other countries.

Several nations, acknowledging the debt, have paid in small part; other nations have failed to pay. One nation—Finland—has paid the installments due this country in full.

Returning to home problems, we have been shocked by many notorious examples of injuries done our citizens by persons or groups who have been living off their neighbors by the use of methods either unethical or criminal.

In the first category—a field which does not involve violations of the letter of our laws—practices have been brought to light which have shocked those who believed that we were in the past generation raising the ethical standards of business. They call for stringent preventative or regulatory measures.

I am speaking of those individuals who have evaded the spirit and purpose of our tax laws, of those high officials of banks or corporations who have grown rich at the expense of their stockholders or the public, of those reckless speculators with their own or other people's money whose operations have injured the values of the farmers' crops and the savings of the poor.

In the other category, crimes of organized banditry, cold-blooded shooting, lynching and kidnaping have threatened our security.

These violations of ethics and these violations of law call on the strong arm of government for their immediate suppression; they call also on the country for an aroused public opinon.

The adoption of the Twenty-first Amendment should give material aid to the elimination of those new forms of crime which came from illegal traffic in liquor.

RELIEF OF SUFFERING

I shall continue to regard it as my duty to use whatever means may be necessary to supplement state, local and private agencies for the relief of suffering caused by unemployment.

With respect to this question, I have recognized the dangers inherent in the direct giving of relief, and have sought the means to provide not mere relief, but the opportunity for useful and remunerative work.

We shall, in the process of recovery, seek to move as rapidly as possible from direct relief to publicly-supported work and from that to the rapid restoration of private employment.

It is to the eternal credit of the American people that this tremendous readjustment of our national life is being accomplished peacefully, without serious dislocation, with only a minimum of injustce and with a great, willing spirit of co-operation throughout the country.

Disorder is not an American habit. Self-help and self-control are the essence of the American tradition—not of necessity the form of that tradition, but its spirit. The program itself comes from the American people.

It is an integrated program, national in scope. Viewed in the large, it is designed to save from destruction and to keep for the future the genuinely important values created by modern society.

The vicious and wasteful parts of that society we could not save if we wished; they have chosen the way of self-destruction.

We would have useful mechanical invention, machine production, industrial efficiency, modern means of communication, broad education.

We would save and encourage the slowly growing impulse among consumers to enter the industrial market place equipped with sufficient organization to insist upon fair prices and honest sales.

UNNECESSARY EXPANSION

But the unnecessary expansion of industrial plants, the waste of natural resources, the exploitation of the consumers of natural monopolies, the accumulation of stagnant surpluses, child labor and the ruthless exploitation of all labor, the encouragement of speculation with other people's money, these were consumed in the fires that they themselves kindled: we must make sure that as we reconstruct our life there be no soil in which such weeds can grow again.

We have ploughed the furrow and planted the good seed; the hard beginning is over. If we would reap the full harvest we must cultivate the soil where this good seed is sprouting and the plant is reaching up to mature growth.

A final personal word. I know that each of you will appreciate that I am speaking no mere politness when I assure you how much I value the fine relationship that we have shared during these months of hard and incessant work. Out of these friendly contacts we are, fortunately, building a strong and permanent tie between the legislative and executive branches of the government.

The letter of the Constitution wisely declared a separation, but the impulse of common purpose declares a union. In this spirit we join once more in serving the American people.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

DETROIT BANK'S 'POLICY LOANS' REVEALED

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Judges of local courts, referees in bankruptcy, politicians and "other influential persons" in Detroit and other cities in Michigan, received a large number of "policy loans" from the Guardian National Bank of Commerce in 1931 when its position began to grow shaky.

This was revealed in a confidential report on the bank's affairs made by a committee appointed by the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., loaning company owner of the bank, which was read into the record today at the resumed hearing conducted by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

LOANS REVEALED

The committee recommended that extension of any more policy loans be stopped. In addition the committee reported:

1—Altogether too many loans for speculation in the stock market had been made to clerks, stenographes, bank clerks, bank officials and other persons without income or financial resources sufficient to repay the loans if their stock market speculation resulted in losses.

2—Too many bad loans had been made to real estate operators, real estate promoters and on real estate which was rapidly dropping in price.

3—"Absolutely unwarranted" large loans had been made to friends of directors of the bank, associates of the directors in some other business and to concerns in which directors had financial interests.

LOSS IN LOANS HUGE

4—That there was an unwarranted concentration of loans on the stock of the parent company, the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc.

5—That many persons obtained loans to buy stock recommended by officers of the bank, in some cases the stock being issued by firms in which the officers had direct financial interest.

The committee reported that the time of the report, may, 1931, the bank had sustained a loss of $3,097,000 on such bad loans as had ben described. It found the two major causes for this loss were "poor credit information and judgment" and "loans to officers of the bank."

Earlier in the session Senator Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, obtained from Bert K. Patterson, former executive vice president of the Guardian Detroit Union group, a virtual admission that the former half-billion dollar holding company had made a practice of rewarding friendly national bank examiners with good jobs after they had made favorable reports and recommendations on subsidiary banks in bad financial condition.

'Laborers Wanted' Sign Finds 'Em Scarce

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—The old time sign:

"Laborers wanted" appeared today on a snow removal truck in front of City Hall.

And the sanitation department said it was no gag.

OKLAHOMA NEAR STERILIZATION

Universal Service.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Jan. 3.—The Oklahoma State Board of Affairs is preparing first steps in administering provisions of the state law authorizing sterilization of habitual criminals as well as certain patients in asylums for insane.

A former statute providing this operation on insane, and which was held valid by the Supreme Court, was amended by the 1933 Legislature to include habitual criminals, which means those convicted the third time or more.

Heads of all institutions affected are required to report to the State Board of Affairs. Twenty cases already have been reported from the state prison at McAlester. Their names are withheld, however. Reports from other institutions are yet to be made. It is unofficially reported the list may run as high as 2,000.

The State Board of Affairs, under the law, must give a hearing to anyone upon whom this operation is to be performed. From the findings of the board any individual is entitled to an appeal, first to the District Court, and then to the Supreme Court.

CLERIC MURDER JURY PICKED

PIGGOTT, Ark., Jan. 3.—(AP.)—The "church war" at Jonesboro was brought prominently to the fore as selection of a jury was started today for the murder trial of the Rev. Dale S. Crowley, Baptist minister, whose fight to retain the pastorate of the large Jonesboro Baptist Tabernacle led to hostilities between two factions and finally to the slaying of J. W. Macmurdo, church janitor for a rival group.

The 46-year-old minister, accompanied to court by his wife and a large array of legal counsel, took a lively interest in the selection of the jury.

Prosecutor Denver Dudley questioned prospective jurors as to their knowledge of the Jonesboro "church war." The prosecutor also asked whether they had any scruples against voting for capital punishment.

The small courtroom was crowded to capacity as court was opened. Many in the crowd were said to be members of one faction or the other in the Jonesboro church dispute.

WORKS FUND CURB SOUGHT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—An effort will be initiated in the Congress convening today to restrict the present freedom of allocations from the public works administration's fund.

High Democratic leaders in the House disclosed today they would back the move to prevent the cabinet public works board from giving money to certain types of projects. Among the proponents of the plan are Representatives Byrns, of Tennessee, the Democratic floor leader, and Buchanan, of Texas, chairman of the appropriations committee.

Both contend the public works board has allotted upward of $2,200,000,000 to already-established departments, without special consideration as to whether Congress in the past approved or rejected the projects on which the money is to be spent.

U. S. DEFICIT OVER BILLION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—The government ended six months of the fiscal year today with an operating deficit of $1,152,972,595, virtually theh amount of emergency recovery outlays.

On general permanent expenditures—such as the routine cost of running the executive departments—Treasury figures showed a two million dollar surplus.

The operating deficit on the same date last year was $1,636,420,124.

Emergency expenditures of $1,155,825,322 since July 1, created this year's deficit. Extraordinary expenditures for the same period of last year amounted to $477,133,622, all by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

$2 LIQUOR TAX UP TO HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—The House Ways and Means Committee today formally approved the final draft of the half billion dollar liquor tax bill and its introduction in the House was in order.

The measure provides a $2 a gallon tax on distilled spirits, $5 a barrel on beer and graduated rates on wines ranging from 10 to 40 cents a gallon.

The committee planned to meet in executive session later in the day after the bill was formally introduced in order to report it out and expedite bringing it up for House consideration this week.

PINCHOT SIGNS MILK CONTROL

HARRISBURG, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—A "square deal for the dairy farmer" is the goal of Gov. Pinchot under the state's new authority to supervise the Pennsylvania milk industry.

Signing an act yesterday which provides for control of the industry by a board of three persons, the governor asserted "we are going to use every power that the law gives us" to achieve that end.

The law will not be put into effect until Pinchot appoints the board members. It expires April 30, 1935.

The board is empowered to set prices which dealers pay and charge for milk and may permit differentials to cash and carry stores, but has no authority over contracts of co-operative associations with milk producers.

The act stated the board "shall" fix minimum wholesale and retail prices and "may" set maximum prices. Licenses are to be issued by the board, their cost depending on the volume of business.

Sneak Thief Takes Barber's Aquarium

Police today sought a sneak thief who carried off C. J. Schram's aquarium from his barber shop at 816 Brushton avenue, yesterday. In the tank were 200 tropical fish valued at $300, Schram told police.

Niagara Loses Red Hue, Turns To Chocolate

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Jan. 3.—(AP.)—The Niagara River today ranks with the rainbow. At least its colors are almost as many as those in a rainbow.

Reports yesterday were that the river was "running red." Last night Reservation Police Chief Tracey C. Levee said the water was "chocolate or coffee color," resulting from recent heavy rains. A reported "mystery shock" at the falls was revealed as blasting at the power intakes to break clogged ice.

Things I Never Knew 'Til Now

(It isn't the feat—it's the stupidity!)

That you will bless me for this one. I've tried it and it works! If you have a cough and you're "dying" for a smoke—then wet the end you light first. It will keep you from coughing—because the steam settles the tobacco dust in the cigaret, if any.

That checkers and chess are the only games in the whole wide, wide world that are played on the square. (Funny mans).

That Dick Powell once flopped in Erie as an MC. (Who hasn't?)

That an obscure college in Philadelphia has exactly eleven students and seven teachers. (I'll bet they shoot crap all day).

That George Arliss and Paul Muni won't listen to directors. Each of these stars has his own experts on this and that.

That every Hollywood studio has a dummy number, which, when the information clerk dials—gives out a busy signal. Just in case instructions that you're n. g. (Which explains so many "conferences").

That there are only five distilleries in Scotland—from which some one hundred and sixty blends. (None as good as gin).

That cold water weighs more than hot aqua. (Win a bet on it).

That if you squeeze a pimple on the face or lips you are liable to be dead within the next 48 hours.

That a child cannot maintain maximum health without one quart of milk each day. (Hurray for Mrs. Hearst's free milk stations!)

That if your windshield wiper won't work, and you're caught in the rain, a piece of plug chewing tobacco, rubbed up and down—not lengthwise—on the glass, will give you clear vision (with no further trouble).

That the name "Charles" is said to be an ill-omen for kings. There is a list of 15 kings who bore the name and were unfortunate.

That the poorest man in St. George, Bermuda, lives alone in one of the best houses on the island—the poorhouse. It is a mansion, overlooking the sea, and he is the only inmate. (Gosh, what privacy!)

That in Asia the mother holds the highest position in the household. The only continent that gives her that respect.

That when you're hungry your sense of smell is sharpest.

That Gregory Ratoff's real name is supposed to be Leontovitch, which his wife, Eugenia, uses as her stage name. (Don't bet.)

That Ben Hecht, the grand writer, was once a circus acrobat.

That a New York firm is putting out garlic in liquid form, guaranteed to leave no after-odor in the breath, and a Los Angeles firm is sticking by the old solid garlic buds, but wrapping 'em in cellophane.

That the Eskimos don't know what is meant by an "igloo!" Those in Alaska never saw one, except in geographies.

That most of the expert ice-skaters on the hockey teams—can't even roller skate! (What a tease I am!)

That if roses and mignonette are placed in the same vase—the roses will wilt and die. Because they hate each other!

That colleges share plenty in football revenue, but the Columbia bandsmen provide their own uniforms, and the Army squad pay for any food they receive at the training table.

That you should be proud of a shiny nose. It's a sign of Youth!

That illiterate China had a history of the United States before we had one of China! (It is to chuckle).

That custom demands that Chinese women never discuss their mothers-in-law. (Velly, velly smott).

That Woodstock, Somers, Suffield and Enfield now in Connecticut, have no business there. Massachusetts has all the right to claim them as her own, which they are—but Mass. probably doesn't know it!

That while American charity wheat was being fed to Russians—the latter were peddling Russian wheat abroad!

That in certain parts of Europe when you go to market you have to bring along your own bags and wrapping paper.

That in Colombo, natives are employed to carry long poles to prevent the birds from roosting in the trees. (Nice people).

That in Hollywood, one of the studios has established a school of instruction, for you'll never guess what—kissing!!!

And that Olin Miller, the Izzy Elinson of Georgia, says that most of us don't start saving money until we haven't any.

Test Winners Won't Leave Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—At it's wit's end, Paramount has enlisted the aid of policewomen and of the Traveler's Aid Society in an effort to force the rejected "search for beauty" contestants to go home.

Of the 24 girls and boys who failed to have their options taken up, only eight have left Hollywood.

Several nights ago, the studio had a representative of the Traveler's Aid Society put Opal McCue, of Milwaukee, and Anna Imsenik, of Philadelphia, on homeward bound trains. The McCue girl hopped off the train in San Beranardino, returned to Los Angeles by stage and was at the studio the next morning. She is of age, and is determined to remain in the film capital.

According to the studio, the Imsenik girl also claimed to be of age, but is said by her mother, who has been keeping the wires hot, to be only 16.

Loretta Walker, contestant from Hillsborough, Ireland, is equally adamant about staying. Paramount attaches say she has deliberately missed four trains. Now they are going to see her off with her ticket stamped in such a way that she can't sell it and with only enough expense money to get her to New York. Taken to a flat there, she will not get another nickel until she goes to the stateroom of an Ireland-bound steamer. Just before the gangplank is hauled in, she will be given her ticket and expense money for the trip home.

The rest of the determined little band are all of age. By a special arrangement made at the time of purchase, their return tickets are good for 25 years.

Poor Stepin Fetchit. He took a party of six friends to a Los Angeles theater and, with an impressive flourish, offered the girl in the box office a $50 bill. She held it up to the light, stalled a bit and finally called the manager. He also held it up to the light, stalled a while longer and, at last, when Stepin was bursting with impatience, okayed the note.

Ralph Bellamy is the latest cinema celebrity to enter the racing game. He has just written a check for $5,000 for a filly, and he plans to race her at Belmont and Bowie in the spring. Ralph also has laid it on the line for a 150-acre farm at Salem, Conn., about 50 miles from Bob Montgomery's place. The Bellamy country estate will be quite impressive. It has a revolutionary type house, a three-car garage, stable accommodations for 30 houres, a steeplechase course and 1,000 feet of brook stocked with trout.

* * *

Is it all an act, Hollywood wonders, or is Jean Muir really another Hepburn for eccentricities?

The Warner Brothers star's latest poser is to ask the studio to let her off for six months a year to teach dramatic history in an eastern girl's finishing school. (She won't name the school).

It's a fact, anyway, that the actress is well versed in the subject and spends a good deal of her spare time poring over early records.

* * *

Returning from his Arizona honeymoon, Gary Cooper was his usual uncommunicative self. When he wouldn't answer the telephone, the studio sent one photographer to the Van Nuys ranch and detailed another to follow Gary's manager, Jack Moss. From the preparations and changes at the Cooper ranch, it appears as if the couple will live there for the time being at least.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Joe Cook, who will bring his new musical show, "Hold Your Horses," to the Nixon next week, out-Goldbergs Rube Goldberg in the creation of useless contraptions on the order of one he used in the old vaudeville days. That, you will remember, was a device of elaborate construction to remind Joe's "stooge," Dave Chasen, to hit the musical triangle at the proper time. The reminder was a mallet that, by means of springs, gears, pulleys, etc., in confusing array, was made to thump Dave on the head when a triangle note was necessary. Joe is still an inventor of various detriments to simplicity, some of his newer creations being on display in "Hold Your Horses."

George Jaffe, proprietor and manager of the Variety, will celebrate his 20 years in burlesque next week. He succeeded the late Harry Williams, veteran burlesque showman, in 1912, but dropped burlesque for a time in favor of vaudeville and pictures, renaming his theater, then the Academy, with its present title. The Variety show next week will be an anniversary event.

* * *

Opening at 12 o'clock tonight in the State Theater, Fifth avenue, there will be a trade and newspaper preview of Ann Harding's new picture, "Gallant Lady."

Helen Wayne and Reginald Stanborough will play the leads in the Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse production of "Up Pops the Devil," opening next Tuesday in the Hotel Schenley Theater for three evening performances.

New Year Gala On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Pictures of the New Years Eve celebration—biggest, wettest and happiest welcome given to a New Year since 1920 are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News with a description of the celebration by the Globe Trotter.

Frances Marsalis and Helen Richey are seen breaking the women's non-stop endurance flying record at Miami, Fla., and landing after having been in the air 10 days.

Three American bison, William Randolph Hearst's gift to Japan, are shown arriving in Tokio. They are the first ever seen there and are given a great reception. After a parade through the streets they are taken to the zoo, where thousands visit them.

The Diamond Robbery

THERE was something about a bus ride, Pinky had discovered, that invited confidence. Put him down beside a man for even the shortest trip between two cities, and by the end of that trip he knew all that he cared to know.

There were other favorable angles to the racket, too. The dicks wouldn't be looking for a guy like him on a bus. There was, invariably, confusion and crowding at the terminal when he managed to lift a wallet or two. And there were so many different bus lines, that he could keep on the jump.

Pinky always arranged things so that he was the last passenger on the bus. For then his ticket would call for a seat beside some man who was riding alone. His companions were usually all of the same breed. Salesmen for cheap concerns, or men going to or returning from visits in their home towns.

This bird beside him now. Pinky studied him covertly. He was middle-aged, fairly prosperous-looking, and he had all the earmarks of a man who is about to start a conversation. Pinky knew the signs. He waited.

A moment or two later, the man turned to him and offered him a cigaret.

"Makes it more pleasant," he began, "if you got some body to talk to."

Pinky agreed and glanced with interest at the small black case the man was holding.

"Say," he asked, "why didn't you have the driver put that up with the rest of the luggage? It'll get tiresome carrying it all the way over."

"I couldn't do that,' he returned. "No, sir, I'm keeping this right where I can keep an eye on it."

Pinky let it go at that for the time being, but his gaze kept returning to the case. They spoke of unimportant things for a while, and then he managed to bring the conversation around to occupations. He grinned when his companion fell into the trap.

"Me, I'm a salesman," he volunteered.

Pinky looked interested.

"Diamonds."

Pinky sat very still, but his spine was tingling with excitement. He licked his lips eagerly as he glanced at the small black case.

"You ain't got samples there?" he demanded.

The man nodded.

"Yeah, and if my firm found out I was traveling like this, it'd be just too bad. But I'll tell you how it is. I thought I'd make a little on my expense account, you see?"

Pinky grinned.

"Sure," he said companionably, "I see how it is. But if I was you, I'd keep an eye on that case."

For a long time after that, he was silent. But he was thinking hard. Sparklers! What a break! His fingers itched. The insignificant amounts of money he'd snatched faded beside the young fortune within his grasp. He had to get that case. Beside him, the man's body was tense. Pinky felt in his back pocket, and grinned with satisfaction.

"Have a drink?" he said, holding out his flask.

The man hesitated.

"Well, I don't know as I should," he began.

He was obliged to urge no longer. The other man helped himself generously. Pinky touched his lips to the flask, but did not drink. He was, he congratulated himself, too smart for that. The flask passed between the men twice. And then Pinky saw with elation that his companion was growing drowsy. His head began to droop. In a very short time he was asleep. His arms fell to his sides. And the black case on his lap swayed back and forth with the motion of the bus.

When the bus pulled into Hartford for a rest stop, Pinky waited until the driver and the rest of the passengers disappeared into the terminal. Then he picked up the case lightly. With practised fingers he found the key in the sleeping man's pocket, and climbed out. A swift glance around, and he began to walk hurriedly toward a taxi stand.

A heavy hand fell on his shoulder. He was jerked around roughly. With a groan, he recognized the man who had stopped him, and the man recognized him. He was one of the breed that Pinky despised—a detective.

"You, Pinky?" he murmured mildly. "Kinda getting out of your class, ain't you? Come on, we're going for a walk."

Pinky went. There was no alternative. But all the way to headquarters he wracked his brain for an explanation to the affair. How had they been tipped off so quickly? How could they have known he lifted the diamonds?

At a sharp word from the inspector, Pinky threw the key across the desk. And when he glanced down at the opened case, he almost gave a whoop of joy. For it was empty. He grinned triumphantly.

"Planted the jewelry, huh?" the inspector growled. "Well, a lot of good it'll do you where you're going!"

There was a short laugh.

"No? Well, that's where you're wrong, buddy. You're headed for the chair. The guy you plugged the jeweler's clerk—kicked off A smart guy like you, Pinky," he went on. "I woulda thought you'd of got rid of that case. That was the only thing we had to go on." . . .

Music Holds Its Own

By JOHN SELBY

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—America has clung tenaciously to her music throughout a year of struggle toward recovery.

As a counterbalance to a drastic curtailment of the Metropolitan Opera's season there has been a great revival of interest in popular opera.

The year brought also the announcement of an opera season in Chicago, directed by Paul Longone, and offering as one of its stars Marion Talley, who returns to opera after a four-year retirement.

At least one new American opera is announced for performance by the Metropolitan — Howard Hanson's "Merry Mount," to a libretto by Richard Stokes. Deems Taylor is at work on another. With his wife, Mary Kennedy, as librettist, George Gershwin is setting Dubose Heyward's "Porgy." Virgil Thompson's "Four Saints in Three Acts," libretto by Gertrude Stein, also is announced for production.

There has been no major curtailment of major symphonic endeavor; actually, there have been advances in some quarters. Generally there has been a movement toward a reduction in seat prices.

The orchestral situation has been enlivened by the debut of Jose Iturbi, pianist, as a conductor, and by the selection of Hans Lange as one of the three major conductors of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony for this season.

The most interesting new personality added to music in the year is Ruth Slenczynski, the 8-year-old California pianist, who plays mature programs like an artist. And a curious musical development has been the introduction of Harry Partch's 37-tone scale.

The trend of composition in America, if the year's production may be used as a base for prophecy, seems to be toward greater simplicity and less cacophony.

G.O.P. CHIEF DOWN CRAIG'S XMAS 'SOCIALISTIC'

Charging the National Recovery Act is a socialistic experiment invading the personal rights of individualism, Attorney William H. Coleman, Allegheny County Republican Committee chairman, contended the economic movement is transplanting the government of European nations in violation of the principles of the Monroe Doctrine.

Asking members of the Hungry Club at its weekly luncheon in the Fort Pitt Hotel yesterday if "we shall continue under the Constitution or bureaucracy," Coleman pointed out:

"If I understand the Monroe Doctrine, the principal feature was to the effect that we should consider any attempt on the part of European nations to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. But under the present national administration, we are abandoning our system and performing under the provision of the NRA that very paternalistic spirit which constitutes the government of the European nations which we desire to bar from the Western Hemisphere."

Schnader's Ruling Backs NRA on Bids

HARRISBURG, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—The Department of Property and Supplies has the assurance of the Attorney General that it may legally invite bids for supplies only from persons and firms displaying the Blue Eagle.

Ruling "you are not compelled to invite proposals from any concern just because it requests the privilege of bidding," Attorney General William A. Schnader's opinion says that firms complying to an NRA code would be penalized for their co-operation if concerns paying lower wages bid against them.

Wiley Post Boosts Roosevelt Parties

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Wiley Post, round-the-world record holder, flew in from Oklahoma City yesterday, to help organize birthday balls throughout the country on January 30 in honor of President Roosevelt.

He will make a series of flights around the country to speed up organization of the balls, designed to raise an endowment fund for the Warm Springs Infantile Paralysis Foundation.

JOHNSON GETS WIDER POWER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Vast new power has been placed in the hands of Hugh S. Johnson by President Roosevelt in an order which left to the NRA head the right to put into effect all codes for industries which do not normally employ more than 50,000 men.

This cleared away from the presidential desk a load of work which he did not want to handle during the Congressional session. He retained exclusively to himself the power to sign codes for the bigger trades, and to impose codes on those which do not come in voluntarily.

NRA also heard more about its action in blocking the move of the banking code authority to impose heavy customer charges on all bank depositors. Scores of telegrams from bankers, some nationally known, were put on Johnson's desk congratulating him for preventing imposition of the so-called standard scales of service charges.

Some said the order had saved country and small town banks from destruction, others characterized the standard scale as "stupid, greedy and calculated to destroy good will."

Modern storage warehouse for Chesterfield tobacco

EUROPEAN WINE CELLAR

SOMETHING like the method of ageing fine wines is used in ageing and mellowing the tobaccos for Chesterfield cigarettes.

There are about four and one-half miles of these Liggett & Myers warehouses filled with thousands of casks of Domestic and Turkish tobaccos, most of it lying there ageing and mellowing for Chesterfield cigarettes.

It takes just about three years to age the tobacco for your Chesterfields.

Everything that money can buy and that science knows about that can make a cigarette that's milder, a cigarette that tastes better, is used in making Chesterfields.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Romance Not Exclusively For Young People

Is romance for youngsters only?

And is it "silly and undignified" to dream dreams and have a hungry heart, if there are silver threads among the gold?

Meaning particularly—does, or doesn't, a lonely widow have a right to new love, new comradeship?

Here's the story:

Dear Elsie Robinson—

I wish you would give me a little advice.

I am a widow, 47 years old. I have a son 20, and a daughter 22. We have a nice home and my boy and girl are very sweet and considerate of me—but it seems as if they think that "my day is done," and that I have no right to expect to be anything but just their mother.

I seem to be distinctly on the shelf, in their eyes, and required to stay there. I am wondering if they are right.

I really didn't notice this attitude of theirs until just lately, when I met a man who used to be a friend of their father years ago. He has moved here, and one day he called on me because he used to know my husband so well. He seemed very much interested in me; so much so, in fact, that my daughter took it upon herself, after he left, to "speak to me" about it in a horrified tone.

She seemed to think there was something cheap and undignified about "a woman my age," and more especially one who was her mother, having a beau.

IRRITATED BY YOUNGSTERS

This man asked me to have dinner with him, and I accepted. I had a lovely time, but when Elsie found that I had actually gone out with him, she said, "Why, mother!" in a shocked voice. And ever since, she has acted as if I should be ashamed of myself.

Perhaps it is my fault that my children regard my going out in that way. Since their father died, 10 years ago, I've devoted myself pretty exclusively to them—outside of belonging to one or two clubs—"hen clubs," you might say, where we discussed books and played cards.

My son is just as bad as my daughter, now that this man has come here, except that he hasn't come right out and spoken his mind as she does.

I find this attitude of theirs distinctly irritating, and the more I think about it, the more irritated I get. I have given them my time, raised them to where they have their own interests. They will be going into homes of their own before very long. Why should I be "on the shelf," just because I'm 47 years old and their mother?

This man is a fine man, and he has shown himself to be much more than casually interested in me. Am I wrong to see him? Should I discourage him? I don't want to. What do you think?

URSULA TREAT.

HAS RIGHT TO FUN

Should you discourage him? Why on earth should you?

You have just as much right to fun and possible romance as any youngster.

Youths has no monopoly on moonlight and orange blossoms—nor has it any greater hunger for love and companionship. So if you want your "rights," take them. You were a woman before you were a mother. You are still a woman, with all a woman's need to live your own life.

As to your children's surprise and selfish resentment—remember, you are largely responsible for that yourself. You made scenery of yourself when you should have remained an individual. Now they're taking you at your own valuation.

So don't be too resentful. Be as tolerant as you want them to be, and you'll get along finely.

And here's hoping!

Who Were the World's Great Lovers? Fay King Tells You

OUR LOVE IS LIKE THE "GREAT LOVES" OF HISTORY!
AND SO IT IS, FOR MOST OF THEM WERE JUST TAWDRY AFFAIRS ALSO!
WHAT CARE WE FOR HONOR, DUTY, OR MARRIAGE VOWS?
FAY KING
YOU'RE AS DEAR TO ME NOW, AS THE DAY WE MARRIED FORTY YEARS AGO!

By FAY KING

The really great love stories of the world have not found their way into books, magazines or newspapers.

For the truly great love stories are not founded in the deceit, intrigue, selfishness and dramatic climaxes that make lively reading.

A great and right love begins as it should in honest youthful romance. There is the joyful wedding where all may beam with pride and pleasure. Then a lifetime of married happiness and content.

Down the years together the great lovers of the world have gone, surrounded by children and grandchildren. Love, loyalty, happiness and devotion ended only with life itself.

Too many of the "great loves" we read about were only dishonorable adventures, and have needed great writers to alibi and idealize them.

Given in Marriage

A Sequel to Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Hunts Package Hidden by Avis.

Avis Arlen's entrance into our living room in my wake was as effective, I guessed as she had planned. As she came confidently smiling through the door there was a little rustle of astonishment, liberally laced with admiration from the masculine members of the gathering. I have noticed that men, no matter how they may dislike a woman or disapprove of her, never fail to give an ungrudging tribute of marked admiration to her beauty, while women are apt to recognize her triumph with a calm, undisturbed sweetness of demeanor more deadly than decided sniffs would be.

"I think you know almost everybody here, Avis," I said, with my hand upon her arm, "but you have not yet met Mary's aunt and uncle."

I led her across the room before anyone could greet her and introduced her to Dr. Braithwaite and his wife. Both greeted her cordially, Edwin with the fatherly admiration which a thoroughly nice, elderly man always bestows upon a pretty girl; Harriet, with kindly courtesy, but with eyes that were keenly watchful and appraising. I knew that Lillian had told her of the scheme which we suspected was hatching, and that she was even more determined than the rest of us that Avis should do nothing which would mar the wedding day of her idolized niece.

STATELY GRACIOUSNESS

When we turned back to the others, Avis spied my mother-in-law sitting regally in her big chair, and went up to her with a pretty deference which could not have been surpassed by any other woman in the room. She has been beautifully trained, and her manner to older people is perfection.

"It is so lovely to see you again, Madam Graham," she said, and I held my breath in wonder at what my mother-in-law would do. I knew that she was infuriated at the girl's effrontery in forcing herself into the wedding party, even at Philip Veritzen's suggestion, and at the audacity of her patent plan to make Mary uncomfortable by an attempt to see Noel alone.

But I need not have feared for my mother-in-law. Years of social training have made her proof against any display of her own emotions when she wishes to subordinate them to social expediency. No duchess could have surpassed her in the stately graciousness with which she answered Avis.

"We are very fortunate to have you with us, my dear," she said, and Harry Underwood punctuated the words with a cough, for which I was sure his wife was punishing him with a pinch.

I felt that the air was electric, and swept Avis through the other greetings as fast as possible, then hurried into the dining room, leaving whispered injunctions with Ronald to see that she did not get upstairs again until I came down, and that no one was to hunt for Noel and Mary. I sent one of our old war-work signals to Lillian, then slipped into the kitchen, upon the pretense of instructing Katie to serve supper to Avis.

GETS WATCHER

A minute later Lillian came into the room from another door, and with a caution to Katie to pretend ignorance of our whereabouts if anyone should ask for us, I caught Lillian by the hand and hurried her up the back stair with me.

"By the signs, I should say there's a nifty bit of barbed wire cutting to be done along the front line trenches," she said sapiently, when we had reached the upper floor.

"There's just that," I said. "Wait just a second. I want to ask Katherine to act as lookout."

I opened the nursery door softly and Katherine, looking up from her book, rose and came swiftly toward me.

"What's up? she asked.

"I can't tell you just now," I said. "I haven't time. But come here long enough to stand in the hall here and keep watch for Lillian and me, while we play 'deteckatif—or sneak thief, whichever you like to call it."

Did I fancy it, or were her eyes suddenly evasive? Again I felt that vague uneasiness about my baby daughter's reaction to the fright the small boys unwittingly had given her.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wedding Gift?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My father and his employer have been friends for a number of years, and now the employer's son (whom my father has known since he was a boy) is to be married. We do not expect to be invited to the wedding, and we would like to know if it would be correct to send a wedding gift? We do not know the young lady or anything about her, and do not know where we could send the gift.

J.

Under these circumstances I believe that it would be better for your family not to send a gift. If, however, in the meantime, an invitation to the wedding does arrive this would be an indication that the sending of a gift would be appropriate. I hasten to add that I do not mean that we send a wedding gift only when we receive an invitation to the wedding, but, in exceptional circumstances such as yours, it does make the gift seem more "called for." Also the invitation would give information about the address of the bride-to-be.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Safe But Sorry

When there are two or more alternative lines of play, the good Bridge player, as a general rule, adopts that alternative which permits a quick change in the attacking methods provided he finds that the method of play first decided upon will not produce satisfactory results. In other words, if the choice is between establishing a low card in one suit or staking the success of the contract upon an immediate finesse in another suit, prudence and good judgment both dictate that the attempt to establish the long-suit trick should first be made if thereby the necessity of the finesse is avoided. Mathematically, a finesse against an honor, the location of which is not known, has exactly an even chance of winning. Thus if there is any safer method of play, a plan that will give an added degree of safety should be adopted.

Mr. William J. Huske, Editor of The Bridge World, had, however, a sad experience with adopting what he considered the best line of play in a recent Duplicate game in New York City, in which he held the South hand below:

West, Dealer.

	♠ A K 9 2 ♡ Q J ◇ A K 8 ♣ A K 7 2
♠ J 8 7 4 3 ♡ A 2 ◇ Q ♣ Q J 10 9 8	West / North / East / South	♠ 10 6 5 ♡ 7 6 5 4 ◇ 9 7 6 5 4 ♣ 5
	♠ Q ♡ K 10 9 8 3 ◇ J 10 3 2 ♣ 6 4 3

The final contract was six hearts, it being unnecessary to point out that North, in reaching this contract, did most of the bidding.

West's Opening lead was a small spade, which South won with the Queen. A low heart was now returned and West went up with the Ace at once and returned another spade. This was won with the King in Dummy. South discarding a club. The Queen of hearts was then led and overtaken with the King, and when the third round of hearts was led from the closed hand, the Declarer found that the heart suit would not break. To draw the last trump appeared to make the play from that point follow a very rigid pattern. The alternative of establishing a low-card trick in clubs, provided East and West each held three clubs, would have to be given up, or the other alternative—namely, that of taking the diamond finesse—would have to be surrendered.

Weighing all these factors and feeling that even though the clubs did not break there still remained the chance for the finesse, the Declarer did not draw East's last trump but led a small club to the Dummy, which was won with the Ace, and the King returned. At this point, East, of course, ruffed, and the contract was defeated one trick.

In looking at all the cards it is easy enough to see that the singleton diamond Queen would have dropped and thus all the troubles in the play of the hand would have been over. However, while the play of the Ace or King of diamonds before drawing the trumps might have been considered the objection to it was that it would have limited the number of entries and entirely precluded the making of the contract provided the fulfillment of it depended upon a break in the club suit. Still, on the whole, I am inclined to think that the Declarer did not make his best play—that he could well have safeguarded himself by laying down one high diamond after leading only one round of trumps. Of course, if the diamond is led, the hand from that point on plays itself, and South would have no problem—distributional or otherwise.

Today's Question

East	West
1 ♡	1 N T

is East, with a strong hand, justified in bidding three notrump, or should he consider West's two notrump bid a signoff?

Answer: West's bid shows more than a minimum and East, with a good hand, is justified in bidding three notrump. With no strength, West could have passed two spades, or if his hand was such that he preferred hearts as trump he could have bid three hearts over two spades, which bid would represent a simple preference and show no additional strength whatsoever.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

A Strict Diet Will Aid Diabetics.

In 1922, two young Canadian physicians discovered that an extract from the pancreas of calves and other animals helped to relieve the symptoms of diabetes. They called this extract "insulin." Knowledge of insulin and its administration has made it possible for thousands of victims of this disease to carry on their work, leading useful and happy lives. This discovery has indeed been a boon to mankind.

Dr. Copeland

We think of diabetes as disease of adults. It is in their lives that insulin brought this great change in a formerly dreaded disease. But also it has saved the lives of thousands of children afflicted with this ailment.

Though the actual cause of diabetes has never been discovered, it is believed that heredity is a factor. The child of a diabetic mother and father is especially liable to the disorder. If one of the parents or grandparents had diabetes it is possible the child may develop it. Fortunately, when proper precautions as to diet, weight and exercise are taken, the disease may be prevented.

Diabetes is more likely to occur in an overweight person. It is more common among females than males and is especially prevalent among the Jews. Many authorities believe that it may be due, too, to continuous indiscretions in diet. For this reason, the dangers of overeating and overweight must be guarded against by everybody.

A child afflicted with diabetes requires expert medical attention. Careful study and observation of the child, together with repeated laboratory tests, are essential to a determination of the proper diet and the necessary amount of insulin that should be given.

Bear in mind that insulin is not a cure for diabetes. But its use permits the afflicted child to eat the foods necessary for proper growth and development.

Not all patients require the same number of units of insulin. As I have said, this can only be determined by certain tests, particularly of the blood and urine. The dosages must be accurately determined. Too little insulin or an excessive amount, is detrimental to the welfare of the diabetic.

The diet must be followed religiously. Failure to observe the rules and regulations laid down by the physician is dangerous. The child should be taught the danger of carelessness in eating. Whenever possible it is best to explain the disease to the young sufferer and in this way to encourage his co-operation. As a rule, diabetic children are extremely bright and quickly grasp the problems presented to them.

Put into the flour for a cake, a teaspoon of custard powder; this will improve the flavor and does instead of one egg.

WEIRTON STEEL PROBER LEAVES

James Lawrence Fly, of Washington, special assistant to the Attorney General, sent here from Washington last week to conduct an investigation in connection with proposed government prosecution of the Weirton Steel Company for alleged abrogation of an agreement with the National Laboard Board, last night returned to the capital.

Attorney Fly would not discuss contemplated plans of the government for litigation against the steel company or announce whether he has completed his investigation. Since arriving in Pittsburgh last Wednesday he has spent considerable time in Weirton, W. Va., and other towns in which plants of the company are located.

On these trips he was accompanied by special agents of the Division of Investigation, Department of Justice, who had made preliminary investigations. He has also conferred with United States Attorney H. S. Dumbauld and other government officials here. Neither would Attorney Fly say whether suits against the company would be filed in the Federal Court here.

WOMAN MAYOR RECALLED

ISSAQUAH, Wash., Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Someone who wears men's pants is in line for Mayor of this little Pacific Northwest coal mining town. The voters have had enough of Mrs. Stella Alexander and "woman rule."

She was recalled by voters at the behest of new male opponents who called her "Madame Mussolini." The vote yesterday was 206 to 85.

But she's not downcast. As she put it:

"Next time I'll go out for a big job. One that pays some money—Sheriff or something."

The recall movement started last summer, after she had fired the town marshal, slashed budgets, saved the town money and paid off an old $893 debt (she said), and otherwise offended the all-masculine Council.

PEACE HOPES RISE IN CUBA

HAVANA, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—President Grau San Martin's announcement that he would resign and hints dropped by the author of a political conciliation plan brought new hope for peace to strife-weary Cuba today.

Without detailed explanation, Grau made it known yesterday he would leave office after May 22—when a constitutional assembly is scheduled to meet. The President also signed a decree setting April 22 as the date of elections for the Assembly.

Dr. Benjamin Fernandez de Medina, Uruguayan minister, and leader in efforts to settle on a plan to restore political tranquility, aroused speculation concerning his movements today.

FORMER MATE OF GLORIA DIES

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Death had claimed another familiar figure of the film colony today, Herbert K. Somborn, 53, confidante of many in Hollywood and a pioneer producer.

Somborn, former husband of Gloria Swanson and father of their 12-year-old daughter, Gloria, now in school in Switzerland, died in his apartments in a fashionable hotel after an illness of a year resulting from kidney complications.

Somborn and Miss Swanson were married December 20, 1919, and were divorced on August 9, 1922. While he was ill she visited him frequently.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength) and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Boswell Trio Swan Song

By AIRCASTER

The kilocycle career of those three Southern harmonists, the Boswell sisters, whose association with radio lately has been on a sustaining basis, seems about to veer into uncertain paths.

There is reason to believe that unless a back-stage dispute which arose on New Years eve is quickly brought to a happy solution, the team, which has for three years maintained a remarkable lead over similar sets of feminine warblers, and brought more imitators into the field than any other radio feature, will sever relations with CBS.

And with the NBC corners badly overcrowded, a switch to the red or blue network becomes a remote possibility.

Few others than the Boswells' manager and the CBS program pilots have any information concerning the nature or cause of the dispute.

The fact that the Boswells haven't figured as of yore in commercial sales talks by the CBS showmen, does not relieve the situation.

The girls are still on schedule, but they and their manager are considerably burned up over some sort of a slight, imaginary or real, and their withdrawal from the air is being talked of seriously.

Rubinoff, the wiolinist, has joined the ranks of inventors and has topped even the celebrated achievements of Col. Stoopnagle, who conceived the inverted lighthouse for submarines.

Of more and vital interest to radio listeners is Rubinoff's muzzled wiolin. It is stradivarius, with an attachment which makes the music from the fiddle inaudible to any but the gent who is playing it.

Necessity materialized it, since Rubinoff must practice in the wee hours when his neighbors sleep.

Grove's LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE

'The Death Dress' Dramatized

An unusual radio play concerning the mysterious disappearance of an attractive young English girl, and the ingenious methods employed by Scotland Yard detectives to trace and convict her murderer, is broadcast over the air tomorrow afternoon and evening, for Altoona and Youngstown listeners.

Adapted from a story in next Sunday's American Weekly, big feature magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, "The Death Dress" is heard over WFBG, Altoona, at 1:30 p. m., and over WKBN, Youngstown, O., at 8:15 p. m.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

A lucky globe trotter is Mayor McNair.

To his apparent surprise he has just discovered he will be paid something even if the city hasn't any money—and it won't be in due bills, either.

How did it happen? Well, the Mayor of Pittsburgh is always a member of the Prison Board Commission, and while Mayor McNair was waiting for the commission to convene yesterday he asked Warden John McNeil to keep him posted on the grounds that he wasn't familiar with the work.

The warden consented, and then added that the Mayor would get $1,000 for attending the meeting. Surprised, the Mayor asked:

"Who from?"

And the city's new executive smiled when the warden told him the pay would come from the county. He further explained that years ago when the mayors of Pittsburgh weren't getting much money, a law was passed to enable them to collect an extra thousand.

The reason I don't have the Mayor on with me today is that he has nothing to talk about. He said that when he has he will come up and see us again.

More Christmas tree news.

C. W. Farrell, 1455 Haas street, Corliss, will keep his Christmas exhibit going until January 15. Parents who take their youngsters to his home will delight them with a volcano in eruption, mountain sides studded with lighted houses, an old mill with the water fall, and other devices, operated electrically, that are miniatures of those in amusement parks.

It's a little late now, but Phil W. C. Glaser, of Charleroi, had the right idea when he wrote that Tuesday (yesterday) would give us an opportunity to write the date in sequence—1-2-34. Many of us missed the chance, but when 2034 rolls around let's hope we won't.

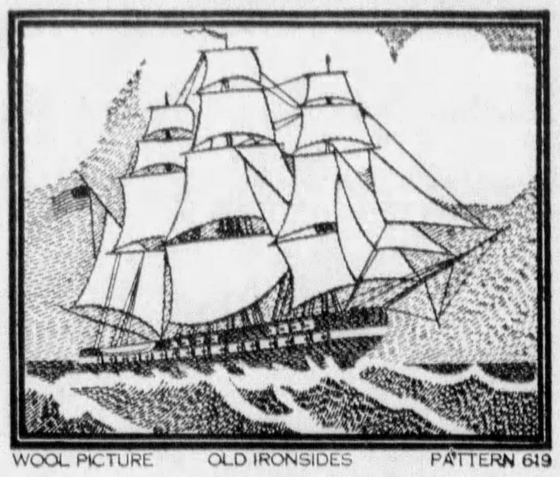
LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



WOOL PICTURE — OLD IRONSIDES — PATTERN 619

Embroider This Picture

No matter how stay-at-home we are, ships have a fascination for all of us. Decorative in themselves, they seem to typify adventure. In Colonial days the needlewoman stitched them in decorative pictures like this one. And what ship could be dearer to the American heart than Old Ironsides? So here it is—authentic in its detail and all ready to do in fine wool or in cotton. And what a handsome touch it will add to a living room or a boy's room!

Pattern 619 comes to you with a transfer pattern of the picture 10x14 inches; a color guide; directions for embroidering and yardage requirements.

Send 10 cents for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

JUNIOR PATROL

Pittsburgh's new Mayor, William N. McNair, was inaugurated New Years Day, fellows.

Let us all hope that he and the other men who have been elected to manage our towns and boroughs will be wise and honest. Men and women who are elected to public office are in the same position as a captain or a lieutenant of a Junior Patrol.

They have the same responsibility for trying to make everything go smoothly, without any trouble, so that the most people benefit by what they do.

How do you feel about it, captains? Are you taking care of your club properly? Are you having regular metings? Are you finding things for your club to do and ways to help others? Think about these things, fellows. Do your best to make your club worth while—so that your parents and everybody who knows you will apperciate what you are doing.

Now we are all back in school again. Didn't the holidays go fast? It didn't seem any time at all between Christmas and New Year, did it? That is the way with Old Father Time when you are having a happy time. He flies along!

We are expecting lots of letters soon, telling us what happened over the holidays, what fun Junior Patrol members had at Christmas and New Years parties and what presents they got for Christmas. Write soon, everybody, and let us know all the news.

We notice, fellows, that Columbia, the eastern team, defeated Stanford, the western team, in the Tournament of Roses football game. Well, you know Columbia was not supposed to have much of a chance. Only a very few people thought the eastern team could beat the western team, especially since the western team was so much bigger. But the game just goes to show you, fellows, that size doesn't always have everything to do with it. Columbia was fast and smart, and Columbia didn't get scared or make any serious mistakes. Columbia won! But Columbia won because they refused to quit trying and fighting. It's a good thing for every Junior Patrol member to remember. Keep trying. Keep fighting. But use your head while you are doing it. Make everything you do or say count.

It takes 10 members to form a patrol, fellows. We keep on getting letters from fellows who want to be captains, but who aren't elected by 10 members, who have badges.

Administration Ignores Mackrell Followers

By MARK SHIELDS.

One of the many strange things about this new and strange Democratic administration is the manner in which the assistance of followers of Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell has been ignored.

Mr. Shields

Every other one of the varied political interests which fused for the election of Mayor William N. McNair has received some sort of recognition, or an effort toward reward. But the followers of Mr. Mackrell, except for what they read in the newspapers, would hardly know that the flag toward which they directed their allegiance was flying over City Hall.

So far they have made no complaint. Mr. Mackrell and his associates have asked for nothing—and that is just what they have gotten.

It is an unusual situation. Consider the rewards which have been passed elsewhere.

* * *

Democrats Didn't Get All They Want

Naturally, the regular Democrats received something, as was their due. It is true they did not receive all they wanted, and that County Chairman David L. Lawrence and Joseph F. Guffey have been somewhat ignored in the negotiation over important jobs. But there was recognition of their leadership to a certain extent.

The Citizens' League, which backed Councilman P. J. McArdle for Mayor in the Republican primary, its leaders later turning in for McNair, has not been badly dealt with. The head of the league has been nominated by Mr. McNair as Director of the Department of Public Works.

Howard B. McNutt, one of the unsuccessful councilmanic candidates on the McArdle ticket, has been named as a magistrate.

Charles F. Papale, who was a magistrate in the Herron administration for a time, and who jumped to the Democrats when he was removed through the influence of Michael DeRosa, of the Twelfth Ward, did yeoman service for McNair. He was offered a magistracy and was confirmed. Although he was reported to have first spurned the job, feeling it an inadequate recognition of his contribution to the Democratic victory, he evidently changed his mind and was sworn in today.

* * *

Gesture of Substantial Reward Made to Malone

James F. Malone, unsuccessful as a councilmanic candidate on both the Republican and Democratic tickets, also deserted his old moorings after the primary and joined with the Democrats. Mr. Malone possesses an unusual organizing ability and is a political strategist of the highest caliber. His personal following is something of a debatable quantity.

He was offered the post of Director of Public Safety, most important in the McNair cabinet, and has become a storm center which has driven a wedge not only between the Mayor and the four Democratic Councilmen, but between Lawrence and Guffey on the one side and M. L. Benedum and the Mayor on the other. It was at least a gesture by the Mayor to hand to Mr. Malone a substantial reward.

Even the Herron Regular Republican organization has been recognized through the retention of Col. William R. Dunlap as head of the Department of Supplies, together with three members of the Board of Assessors.

* * *

Nothing for Mackrell Or His Supporters

But there has been nothing for the Mackrell supporters, or for Mr. Mackrell.

The Mayor has conferred with the Register of Wills once or twice, but none of the party leaders has given him a tumble.

In view of the vote Mr. Mackrell received as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Mayor it was easily ascertainable that he had a substantial following.

He ran ahead of the Citizen's League ticket.

Then, presumably, he must have had more votes to carry with him to the Democratic candidate for Mayor.

When he supported the Democratic candidate he did so without reservation.

Policeman's Job in Council Tough Now

It is a tough job being a policeman in Council chamber these days. There is frequent disorder. President Garland issues orders to put out any one who hoots a Councilman. He insists upon order, and instructs the police to secure it.

But, as one policeman said yesterday, there is a new crowd in Council chamber these days. And an officer, obeying the behest of the Council president, may discover to his subsequent sorrow that he has thrust beyond the doors some gentleman who holds a place of influence in the Democratic party.

Just as a suggestion to the Mayor as he seeks for patriots to fill certain jobs:

In his "lobby office" he told all and sundry that he wanted none but "specialists" for the jobs which seemed a bit puzzling, but was reiterated.

In line with this policy, why would it not be an excellent idea to hire Chic Sale, dean of all the "specialists." He, a real humorist, wouldn't be out of place.

GRAHAM HEADS CITY SCHOOLS AGAIN

Re-elected for Six Years at $13,500 Salary

Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of schools for the past three years, was re-elected yesterday by unanimous vote of the Board of Public Education. The term of office is six years, with an annual salary of $13,500.

James Bonar, superintendent of buildings, and W. E. Strickler, superintendent of supplies, were also re-elected. Bonar's office pays $7,200 and Strickler's $6,000.

James P. Kerr, City Controller, was elected school controller in a mandatory election, and James P. Kirk, City Treasurer, was elected school treasurer. Dr. Kerr's office has a salary of $4,000, and Kirk will receive a nominal wage of a dollar a year.

A recommendation of Dr. Graham that the Frick Training School for Teachers be closed to new students until June passed the board by a vote of seven to four. Dr. Graham based his suggestion on the fact that 200 graduates of the school are now on a waiting list for teaching positions.

Contracts were awarded by the board for materials needed on Civil Works projects on school grounds. Bonar said that 400 men are now at work on CWA school jobs, and 200 more are to be added.

It was announced that despite decreased collections on current taxes, the board has begun the New Year with approximately $350,000 more than it had expected to have, due to careful reduction of expenditures.

A committee to study means of collecting taxes for 1934 and of expediting the collection of delinquent taxes, was appointed, with J. W. Bamford, president of the Building Owners' and Managers' Association, as chairman. Other members of the committee are Dr. Marion McKay, N. R. Crss, Dr. Kerr, Joseph H. Bialas, and Alex P. Reed.

Salaries for two teachers who failed to notify authorities that they would be absent from duties to appear as witnesses in Federal Court were ordered refunded. The teachers were called in the 1932 congressional election fraud cases. Four teachers had received their pay due to notifying the school authorities. Graham recommended yesterday's action.

3 Policemen Free Of Assault Charges

Charges of aggravated assault and battery preferred by two Mexicans against three North Side radio policemen before Justice of the Peace Margaret Morgan were withdrawn today. The Mexicans, Eduardo Malvido, former secretary to the Mexican consulate in Pittsburgh, and his friend, Armendo Robleda, made information against the police after they were held for court by Magistrate Ray Schneider, North Side Court, on charges of pointing firearms and carrying concealed weapons. During the melee with police both Mexicans suffered broken jaws. The officers are Albert Kidd, James Dilworth and Hugh Haggerty.

World Starting With Brand New Slate to Crack

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

World is starting with a new slate. It seems to like anything that will crack easily.

What worries us now is finances. Like the baby who swallowed the dime, there is a royal road to recovery.

Therefore, we must make credit easy by making the creditors uneasy.

Cycles move in terms of seven years. There were seven years of drought in Egypt. Seven years of famine. Also seven years of grasshoppers.

Death Threat Charged In Husband's Suit

Charging that she threatened to kill him, W. D. Carnahan, who was president of the Elizabeth Township School Board, has filed suit for divorce from Isabella Carnahan.

Among other things, Carnahan charges his wife circulated stories about him to defeat him for office.

He also asserts she attempted to strike him with a book-end, saying:

"All right—on this day you die."

Their parting came, his suit asserted, when Mrs. Carnahan brought in another woman and urged her to assist in "knocking his head off." He then told her he had stood her abuse 30 years and would endure it no longer, he says.

Carnahan charges his wife struck him and knocked him down. They have two children.

HOSPITAL LOAN STORIES DIFFER

Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic state leader, told officials of the Allegheny General Hospital that the Federal Emergency Public Works Administration had approved its application for a two-million-dollar loan to complete construction of the hospital's new 20-story building in East North avenue, North Side.

Guffey said he had been advised of the loan by Washington sources last night.

In Washington, however, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, who administers the Public Works funds, said there had been no decision.

Application for the loan was made under the amendment to the Emergency Relief and Construction act, authorizing loans to private corporations devoted to public use, including hospitals.

Work on the new hospital building was stopped nearly two years ago when funds were exhausted. Up to that time $6,500,000 gathered in a subscription campaign had been spent.

BOY, 7, KILLED BY TRUCK

Michael Mutillaka, 7, of 905 Sable street, Duquesne, was injured fatally when struck by a truck near his home late yesterday. He suffered a fractured skull and died a short time later.

J. H. Reno, of 1015 Grandview avenue, alleged driver of the truck, was ordered to post bond at the Coroner's office.

A hit-run driver of an automobile which struck Mrs. Lelia McGarvey, 42, of 243 Republic street, as she walked across Ellsworth avenue, near Morewood avenue, late last night, was being hunted by police today.

Mrs. McGarvey was taken to Homeopathic Hospital, where it was said her condition is critical.

WOMAN VICTIM OF DIPHTHERIA

Diphtheria, fatal mainly to children under 10, already has taken its first adult victim of 1934 in Pittsburgh. Mrs. Mary Louise McCurry, of 1010 Steuben street, West End, for whom funeral services will be held tomorrow, died of the disease Monday night.

So rare are diphtheria fatalities among persons over 30 that the city Bureau of Vital Statistics records all such deaths in a single-age group, the greatest number since 1922 having been reached in 1927, with five fatalities. During 1931 and 1932 two were recorded in the group, and none in the first 11 months of 1933, according to the bureau.

YOUTH BEATEN, ROBBED OF $35

Louis Lester, 23, of 730 Excelsior street, walked into the Central Police Station early today and said he had been beaten and robbed of $35 by two men with whom he was slightly acquainted.

He was suffering from a number of lacerations and sent to Allegheny General Hospital for treatment.

Lester told police he had accompanied the two men in a taxicab from Twenty-first and Carson streets. They drove to a Smithfield street hotel, where Lester said he was beaten.

Word of election of Mrs. Ruth Esther Dieffenbacher, of Erie, formerly of Pittsburgh, to membership in the American Association of University Women, has been received here by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Lenon, of Ivy street, East End.

Mrs. Dieffenbacher attended the Liberty School (Seventh Ward) and Peabody High School, and is a graduate of the Pennsylvania College for Women. She was elected to membership in the organization by the Erie College Women's Club.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Jan. 3.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

The big Columbia-Stanford football game. Mr. Hoover was there, looked fine, and got a big reception. He was the main old grad from Stanford. I was the main old grad from Columbia. I took a correspondence course from there one time in tenor singing.

Will Rogers

Just the make of the skin that covers the ball beat Stanford. If instead of pigskin, the ball had been covered with porcupine hide, (with the quills on) maybe Stanford could have held on to it. But the game was in keeping with everything else that happened in sports, government and economics, the past year. The experts were wrong again. Yours, WILL.

RUM SHOP HITCH BLAME LAID

Philip W. Gundelfinger, district superintendent here under the State Liquor Control Board, today placed full responsibility for having only one state liquor store open in Allegheny County with Roy A. MacGregor, the board's rental agent for Allegheny and Beaver Counties.

At the same time, Gundelfinger announced that the second store for the county will be opened this week at 849 Braddock avenue, Braddock.

While the state's liquor market as a whole was in doldrums today following the official openings yesterday, Allegheny County's single store in Coraopolis "did a very nice business," according to Gundelfinger. No figures on sales were made public.

Fear was expressed in some quarters that all of the state store employes would not be able to hold their jobs, because of the failure of Pennsylvanians to deluge the opened stores with orders yesterday.

The store in Coraopolis was well able to handle all the trade here

AID PROMISED IN PAY FIGHT

United States Senator David A. Reed and Congressmen from the Pittsburgh district have pledged their support to restoring the 15 per cent wage cut to federal employes, Joseph F. Prestia, secretary of Local No. 81, National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, announced today.

Senator Reed, in stating his position, said:

"There is neither reason nor justice in cutting the meager pay of these men while handing out money by the bucketful in other directions."

Oath Administered Duquesne Officials

Newly-elected officials of the city of Duquesne were officially sworn in at a meeting in the council chambers last night. The oath of office was administered by City Clerk Charles E. Dorman to Mayor Jesse J. Crawford, City Controller Egan C. Kasten and Councilmen Edward H. Fey and J. Murray Lenhart. All were re-elected.

The first official act of the council was to reduce the personnel of both the police and fire departments by six men.

SEWICKLEY MAN LONG FOE OF WHISKY

Heir to Liquor Riches Aids Prohibition; No Family Rift

Gundelfinger, a name once synonymous with "everything good to drink" in pre-prohibition Pittsburgh, in the future will be both wet and dry.

With the Eighteenth Amendment dead and liquor returned, the widely known name not only is coupled with 70 liquor stores in this end of the state, but with the fine arts—literature and music.

Dr. George F. Gundelfinger, of fashionable Sewickley, said today that he is keeping his side of the family "bone dry." He is one of the country's most ardent drys, having spent more than $50,000 for temperance.

BROTHER WITH RUM BOARD

His brother, Philip W. Gundelfinger, who lives across the Ohio River in Coraopolis Heights, stepped in the opposite direction. He is district superintendent for the Board of Liquor Control and property owned by him at 342 Boulevard of the Allies was the first place downtown to be selected as a state liquor store site.

Their father, William C. Gundelfinger, who died in 1926, garnered most of the family's wealth through the sale of rum. His store at 212-16 Diamond street is still remembered as a liquor dispensary before the advent of prohibition.

Dr. George F. Gundelfinger 20 years ago, organized the New Fraternity, an organization which since that time has been carrying on an educational campaign against drunkenness.

FIRST INTERVIEW

In an interview with the Sun-Telegraph, his first ever accorded a newspaper, because he says he wants his cause to be "impersonal," Dr. Gundelfinger said:

"This is my life work and I am going to continue right on. I admit that my funds were derived from the sale of liquor, but I know of no better way of disposing of the money.

"Don't think that there is a feud between my brother and me. We have our own ideas and are good friends. My father, however, did not like my ideas too well."

There has not been a student at Yale in the last 20 years who has not heard the name of Gundelfinger. Since it is Dr. Gundelfinger's alma mater, it is there that he sends to every incoming freshman class a complete set of pamphlets. And it is there that he is rebuked the most.

RIDICULED ON CAMPUS

In 1932, the Yale News, campus publication, published a cartoon entitled "The Lunatic at Large," depicting Gundelfinger throwing his writings from a balloon above the Yale campus. On the balloon were written the words "Hot Air," while the writings were called: "Trash! Bunk! Hooey!"

In his latest publication, the Interquadrangular, Dr. Gundelfinger republished that very cartoon. He carries on in spite of ridicule.

Yale's president, Dr. James R. Angell, and the university trustees, have ignored him, Dr. Gundelfinger said, although he sends them each new copy of his small phamphlets.

MISTAKEN, HE SAYS

As to their attitude he said:

"I think that they will see their mistake some day; see how foolish they have been and swing my way."

Mr. Gundelfinger is in middle age. He was graduated from Yale in 1906, received his doctor of philosophy degree two years later, and was an instructor in mathematics for four years.

From 1918 to 1921 he was a professor of mathematics at Carnegie Institute of Technology and the University of Pittsburgh. Since leaving the teaching field he has spent his time in publishing songs, poetry and his opinions on timely events.

Stuart Answers Critics On CWA Job Delays

Replying to critics of the Civil Works Administration in Allegheny County, James L. Stuart, local CWA administrator, has repeated that he will have 30,000 workers employed on CWA projects by the middle of January. About 35,000 jobs have been approved by his office, he said, and more are coming in daily.

The number of men actually assigned to jobs is estimated at more than 16,000. The difference between the two figures was explained by Stuart as arising from time-requiring obstacles that must be overcome after a project is approved here and before it actually gets under way.

Jobs sanctioned in the local office must also be passed on by the state administration, and approval from Harrisburg sometimes requires a week's time. After approval is received, preliminary work, such as securing equipment and engineering supervisiors, frequently causes a delay.

After work has begun, many projects requiring a large number of men cannot employ their full quota until a small band of initial workers have cleared the way for the complete corps. An example is the Cathedral of Learning undertaking where jobs were sanctioned for 1,000 although only half that many have been hired to date.

Stuart said he welcomed criticism based on facts, but resented that founded on misinformation as being harmful to the CWA campaign and its progress.

COUNTY JAIL FEEDING COST CUT TO 8½ CENTS A DAY

WEST VA. DAM TO GIVE JOBS TO HUNDREDS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Three hundred men will be put to work "almost immediately" clearing shrubbery and making borings for the huge Tygart River dam in West Virginia, the Public Works Administration announced yesterday.

Three million dollars has been allotted for the dam, this sum to cover the first year's work on the structure. The full period of construction will be about three and a half years and the total cost will be about 12 million dollars.

Further allotments are expected to be made from additional Public Works funds, provided additional money for carrying on the Public Works program is made available by Congress, as the President is expected to request. If such money is not available, a special appropriation would have to be made by Congress to carry on the construction of the dam after the first year.

PLAN OTHER DAMS

The Tygart River dam is one of a number under consideration for flood control and stream regulation in the Pittsburgh area. The largest of the dams, under the plan, would be in the Allegheny, near the Pennsylvania-New York state line. The Tygart is the second largest.

The Pittsburgh area plan is, in turn, only a link in the vast program for flood and stream control of the entire Mississippi drainage area.

Under the program tentatively worked out for the construction of the Tygart dam, 300 men will be employed the first six months, 900 men the seventh month, 1,800 men the eighth month, 2,200 men from the ninth to the thirty-eighth month, 1,800 men the thirty-ninth month, 900 men the fortieth month and 300 men the forty-first month.

DIRECT WORK HERE

Almost all of the money needed for the structure will go for labor and materials, as most of the area which the reservoir will cover is already river bed. Of the total, $258,000 has been allocated for the purchase of required land and the erection of buildings and other facilities needed during the construction period.

Commenting on the reasons why the Tygart Dam was selected as the first to be constructed in the Pittsburgh area program, Donald L. Bower, secretary of the Public Works Administration's Mississippi Valley Committee, said:

"Most of the money can be spent for labor, as little land is needed. It can be begun at once and the traffic on the Monongahela River is almost as great as that of the Panama Canal."

The work will be carried on under the supervision of the Pittsburgh district of the War Department's engineers corps. The location of the dam will be about four miles from Grafton. Workers are expected to be brought to the job from nearby cities, which include Fairmont, Morgantown, Clarksburg, and from other communities in Western Pennsylvania and Northern West Virginia.

yesterday. The slack demand was partly explained by the fact that hotels, restaurants and clubs already are supplied with liquors obtained before inauguration of the state store system.

The state's liquor warehouse here today was well supplied to care for the district's demand, Gundelfinger pointed out, stating that 23,000 cases have been received.

He also explained the delay about which retailers have complained in getting their orders from the warehouse. This, he said, was due to the fact that every bottle sold must first be sealed with a state stamp. When new orders are placed with the distillers, these seals will be placed on the bottles at the factories.

VARIETIES LIMITED

None of the stores had a great variety of liquors, although long lists were posted showing prices ranging from 65 cents a pint for gin to $7 a quart for bottled in bond whisky and rarer wines.

The Control Board promises that bigger stocks will be provided. The law requires that any liquor demanded by a customer must be supplied.

Licenses have been granted to 4,932 retail dealers in the state. The Control Board granted 199 and rejected 63 yesterday. The rejections included:

Oakland Rod and Gun Club, 71 Chatham street, Pittsburgh; West View Hotel, Ross Township; Hotel Kalinna, 304 Warrington avenue, Pittsburgh; Carson Lunch Room, 2848 Carson street, Pittsburgh; Market Street Restaurant, McKeesport; Stanley's Restaurant, Braddock; Steiner and Gross Restaurant, McKeesport; Guiseppe and Nick Di Mattio, West Deer Township; Walt's Garden Cafe, Braddock; Mykita's Restaurant, Carnegie; Tellinger Lunch Room, McKeesport; Honey Dew Dairy Store, Wilkinsburg; A. Court Clerk Begins 36th Year on Job

ROBERT JACK MOORE

Jack Moore Expert At Lining Up Cases

Robert Jack Moore who has handled tens of thousands of court cases, yesterday began his thirty-sixth year of service in Common Pleas Court and the Prothonotary's office.

Moore, an exceptionally hard worker, has been frequently complimented by various judges for his work, together with that of his assistants. He has been chief clerk of Common Pleas Court since October 31, 1.14, at which time he succeeded the late Robert P. Moore.

He began as a paper boy in the Prothonotary's office January 2, 1898, under A. J. McQuitty, and was appointed court clerk of Common Pleas No. 1 in November, 1905. That was before the consolidation of the various courts into one Common Pleas branch. Moore's duty is to call each jury for service, send out the cases to various judges and see that the business of the court is properly dispatched.

When in disputes in listing cases, etc., most judges tell lawyers:

"See Jack Moore about it."

WORK ON RIVERS FACES CURB

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Only maintenance work in Western Pennsylvania's navigable rivers during the year starting next July 1 was recommended today by the army's chief of engineers in his report to Congress.

With available funds trimmed by the budget bureau, the report recommended expenditure of $1,337,000 for open channel work in the Ohio, $2,500 for open channel work in the Allegheny, and $4,000 for maintenance of the channel in the Youghiogheny at McKeesport.

In view of budget cuts, $613,000 for new work in the Ohio was eliminated. That would have included dredging, construction of dikes and surveys. The engineers also trimmed $200,000 from their Allegheny recommendation.

Funds are on hand for the only new work contemplated for the Monongahela, extension of the upper guard wall at lock 7. The cost is estimated at $16,000.

Dog Joins Master In Suicide After Death Vigil

A posse ended a two-day search by finding the body of Philip Ferenchina, 52, mill worker. The dog, owned by Ferenchina, had kept vigil beside the snow-covered body. Ferenchina ended his life by blowing his face off with a shotgun.

NORMAN DAVIS' BROTHER IN PLOT CASE

National attention has been directed to Tennessee by the arrest of powerful banking and political figures. Universal Service sent Earl L. Shaub, of its staff, to the state to obtain the facts in this case, which has national ramifications. The first dispatch of a series appears today.

By EARL L. SHAUB
Universal Service.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 3.—The arrest of Paul M. Davis, banker, brother of Norman H. Davis, ambassador-at-large, on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the state, has caused the greatest political turmoil Tennessee has experienced since Senator Carmack was shot down on the streets of Nashville.

Arrested with Davis were A. V. Louthan, who has been identified with power interests; V. J. Alexander, president of a Davis chain bank at Memphis, and J. I. Reece, former State Commissioner of Insurance and Banking. They all made bond yesterday. The date of their trial has not been set.

CONSPIRACY CHARGED

They are accused of a conspiracy to take $22,800 out of the state insurance tax fund and with using the money to elect Gov. Hill McAlister in 1932. Davis, Louthan and Alexander were the finance committee of the McAlister campaign.

When Reece recently was before the grand jury he confessed his part in the transaction and waived immunity. He said the other three promised to replace the money.

The case has loosed a flock of rumors of banking, power trust and political scandals that will probably pop in the courts and records during the next few days and involve several men of national prominence.

Those who may become involved are working frantically both here and in Washington to head off the greater scandals which are about to break over their heads. To that end they have brought about the removal of A. V. McLane, Federal District Attorney here, who had recommended prosecution of some of the Tennessee bankers on charges of violating the banking acts. McLane had urged this prosecution on the strength of reports of bank examiners.

BANK EXPOSE LOOMS

One of the banking scandals may break in the near future, according to M. H. Goldschein, assistant to Richard M. Atkinson, Attorney General of the Tenth Judicial District, who said last night:

This office has under investigation certain direct charges of violation of the state banking laws by Davis, Alexander and other officials of the Davis chain of banks. If the investigation of these charges establish prima facia guilt, this office will initiate prosecution, either by the swearing out of warrants or by presentation to the grand jury.

"Neither the League of Nations nor the big and little entente of Brother Norman can stop it."

In commenting on those who have been arrested, Goldschein, in a formal statement, said:

"The accused are powerful. They may today be above the law in Tennessee. Perhaps their figures are so colossal they can bestride even Uncle Sam."

It was Goldschein, an iron-jawed individual, who swore out the warrants against Davis and the others. As a result of his labors and his statement, Tennessee is looking for real fireworks that will involve other and bigger men in the next day or two.

KEYSTONE BANK PLANS WIN APPROVAL

Western Pennsylvania has come through the banking crisis with a comparatively good record, according to an announcement made by Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor.

His summary of the record of national banks shows that 90 institutions in the western part of the state were unable to resume business at the close of the bank holiday on March 15.

Of these, 42 have been reorganized or acceptable assets have been bought by operating banks and depositors have received all or part of their funds. Of these, 18 paid their deposits in full. The rehabilitated banks had deposits of $81,104,000.

PLANS APPROVED

In addition to these banks, 39 with deposits of $53,917,000, have had reorganization plans approved which will release at least a portion of deposits in the near future.

Of particular interest to Pittsburgh is the fact that the reorganization plan of the Keystone National Bank has been approved and the institution will be able to pay depositors in full.

In Western Pennsylvania, the reorganization plans of only nine banks with total deposits of $23,493,000 have been rejected.

O'Connor stated, however, that there is a possibility that, with improved conditions, these banks may yet reorganize.

ASSETS RELEASED

Deposits involving $255,691,000 were frozen in 183 banks which failed to open in the entire state. Since March 15, 76 banks with $106,027,000 in deposits have been rehabilitated and 80 banks with $120,367,000 in deposits have approved reorganization plans in various stages of completion.

Only 27 banks had plans rejected, and only one of these, the National Bank of America, is in Pittsburgh.

All the banks with plans approved or with reorganizations completed, have paid secured deposits in full. Deposits of this class represent funds of boroughs, townships, cities, counties and of the state for which the banks have been required to put up security.

RADIO RESCUES FLIER IN FOG

Circling the Pittsburgh district seeking familiar landmarks through a haze veiling the Ohio River Valley, Dean Burford, TWA pilot flying from Columbus, O., to Pittsburgh, was guided into the City-County Airport by radio.

Burford was flying in on the Department of Commerce directional radio beam when it was lost due to a minor breakdown as he neared Bellevue. Radio contact was made after Bellevue residents called the airport. Burford, who battled a snow storm for more than an hour in a flight from Columbus last week, circled Pittsburgh twice before he was guided to the port.

Money Woes Face Couzens in Detroit

DETROIT, Jan. 3.—(Universal.)—Frank Couzens, 31, son of United States Senator Couzens, yesterday became Detroit's youngest mayor.

The city is in financial difficulties and payrolls have been met with scrip. Couzens, however, has long been studying municipal affairs and declared he is ready for the job ahead. He became acting mayor last spring.

Steel Worker Falls Dead at J. & L. Plant

Collapsing in the South Side plant of Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation last night, Frank Kojtek, 38, of 31 Keibs way, was dead on arrival at South Side Hospital, according to a morgue report. Kojtek was married and had worked at the plant 14 years.

22,541 LOCKED UP DURING 1933

That 22,541 prisoners at the county jail have been fed in 193[illegible] at a cost of less than 8½ cents a day each is one of the facts learned by Mayor William N. McNair in his brief term.

Jail statistics, with a descriptive tabulation of a variety of unwilling guests, were presented yesterday at a meeting of the Prison Board by Warden John McNeil. McNair attended in the Mayor's capacity as a board member.

JAIL FARM HELPED

Slipping off from the turmoil of Council chamber, the new Mayor sat quietly during the 193[illegible] elections, seconding a motion now and then. Warden McNeil and the jail physician, Charles J. Ellis, were re-elected. Judge George V. Moore was chosen chairman of the board to fill the place of retiring Judge James R. Macfarlane.

In his report Warden McNeil attributed the low food average—the actual figure was .083—to low food prices in the first half of the year and an abundance of vegetables produced at the jail farm. Total food cost was $22,431.

But some 90 per cent of the inmates had been held awaiting hearings, McNeil said. Forty-six murder cases were received. There were no electrocutions from the county.

SURVEY MADE

A survey of prisoners seemed to explode the expression "single blessedness." Single persons almost doubled the number of married among the accused.

As for professions, there were 58 butchers, 70 bakers, and candlestickmakers were about the only ones omitted. Dignity was given by four bankers, three brokers, 15 doctors and two butlers. School could have been held by 93 students and one teacher.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

Tonight's the final night in the social spotlight for the debs of 1933, and after such a round of parties as they've had, they're quite content to have a grand climax tonight.

For, unless some energetic hostess plans something more, tonight's debut winds up the season. Tonight dark-haired young Alice Ladley will be presented at a ball her parents, the E. J. Ladleys, will give in the Twentieth Century Club.

At this, the "last roundup" of the debs, there'll be a return to holiday decorations. Pine trees will be arranged in the ballroom in forest effect, and banked in front of the stage, where the orchestra will play. The railing of the balcony will be entwined with smilax and silver leaves.

Tonight's Deb to Wear Pastel Blue Crepe

The deb will wear a pastel blue crepe dress, with a roll of crystal beads marking the high neck-line in front. The bodice will be cut low in back. She will carry a dainty muff of roses and gardenias. Her mother will appear in a black-corded silk dress with a silver bodice, and will have a corsage of orchids.

Young men on the floor committee will be Paul Snyder, Coleman Ward, John Haines, Alex Hay, Neil Brown, George Harton, John Bachelor, William Kountz, and the deb's brothers, Charles and Pete Ladley.

Out-of-town guests will be Virginia Ferguson, of Greenwich, Conn., a debutante; Atwell Moore, of Scarsdale, N. Y.; the Kenneth Kellys, of Pelham Manor, N. Y., and Dr. and Mrs. R. I. Haskell and their son, William, of Philadelphia.

Two Entertainments Given for Debutantes

There were two entertainments, not debuts, for two debutantes last night. The William G. Costins and their son, William G. Costin, Jr., gave a ball for the senior Costin's niece, striking Mary Gordon, last night in the Pittsburgh Club. Mary is the daughter of the Frank B. Gordons.

Scenery on the stage was banked with greens, and greens on the lights decked the ballroom. In the foyer were more greens. For the supper tables, there were colorful poinsettias.

Katherine Edwards and the John M. Lazears entertained for their young debutante relative, Mary Edwards, daughter of the George D. Edwards, last night at a dinner in the Pittsburgh Golf Club, preceding the ball. Spring flowers decorated the table.

Vivacious Young Guests Wear White

The deb season may be just over, but the engagement season is here. Added to the many betrothals of the holiday season is still another one of interest.

The Henry William Smiths, of Beverly place, announce the engagement of their daughter, Wilhelmina, to Edward Kennedy Davison, son of the McConnell Davisons, of Heberton avenue.

Wilhelmina is a graduate of Thurston and of National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Md. Her fiance is a graduate of Shady Side and of Princeton.

Interesting Event For Music Lovers

An interesting event for music lovers is scheduled for Monday evening, January 22—the first concert of the season of the Pittsburgh String Orchestra in Carnegie Music Hall. Toscha Seidel, violinist, will be the soloist of the evening. Directing the string orchestra is Ferdinand Fillion.

Among the indorsers of the orchestra are Mrs. Ralph W. Harbison, Mrs. D. M. Clemson, David Light, Mrs. Roy Arthur Hunt, Mrs. F. F. Rohrer, Mrs. John F. Walton, Mrs. Jacob S. Payton, Mrs. Ada B. Bassett, Mrs. A. S. F. Keister, Marshall Bidwell and Mrs. Jullian Kennedy, Jr.

Others are Mrs. Harry B. Wassell, Wilmer M. Jacoby, H. A. Nomer, Homer Saint-Gaudens, Miss Helen Rauh, the Charles L. Reizensteins, Dr. Will Earhart, Mrs. William R. Jarvis, Lee M. Lockhart, Mrs. Edward G. Caughey, Mrs. Enoch Rauh and Mrs. John M. Freeman.

Having been an eye-witness to what becomes of pajamas when mankind has worn them some months, we feel justified in remarking about the men's pajamas which one of the stores is offering now for $1.69—pajamas, incidentally, which were selling as high as $2.50 before.

There are broadcloth, sateen and madras ones . . . in fancy effects (all sizes) or plain colors (only A's and B's in these). Of course . . . one of the reasons why they are reduced is because they are slightly soiled . . . but soap and water will soon remedy this, and, of course, they're tubfast! Middy, surplice front (with and without collar) and V-neck with lapel style. All colors.

* * *

A few of those mirror initial clips left to sell at 25c each! To satisfy your desire to have your initials plopping 'round over your person in the current manner! These are gunmetal, amber or clear mirrored glass . . . about an inch and a half high . . . and very nice for this lowly amount. (The alphabet of them is broken, so don't expect to get your own letters unless you get there early.)

* * *

If you really appreciate nice things for your bathroom . . . hie yourself to the store which is selling out a few slightly soiled towels and such!

See those luxuriously deep, soft pile bath mats with flowers growing rampant all over them . . . in luscious shades . . . for something like $1.29 (and they were always 'round $2 and $3 before). Gorgeously big, smartly colored bath towels . . . Cannon make . . . for 29c! And lovely squishy wash cloths for a thin dime! Even lid covers with posies for somehing around $1 (and they're always more).

* * *

If, like Curlilocks, you can "sew a fine seam" . . . then this bit of information about new cottons will be a joy-bringer!

For there are some new cottons in now . . . looking so much like wool that we positively had to stop and peer closely at them to understand that they weren't. In plaids . . . of reds, browns, blues, greens, and other combinations . . . all fast color . . . 36 inches wide . . . and costing the magnificently small sum of 25c the yard!

* * *

Although New Years has come and gone . . . we presume there are those of you who will jump at the chance to own a stunning chrome cocktail shaker . . . if it only costs $3.35! At this price the thumpety-thump of your shaking should increase a hundred-fold! Large . . . capacious . . . with strainer tops like all good shakers should have! * * *

What price muffins for breakfast . . . or waffles for late suppers? We'll answer—for 25c!

Because, you see, we have found the secret . . . the "mix" which does the trick for muffins, shortcakes and waffles as pancake flour does for pancakes! A whole big boxful of it . . . ready to use after you've stirred in water and an egg. And made by the Eskimo Pie people . . . so you know it's good!

THERE ISN'T a girl now sailing over the Spanish Main on even the least de luxe cruise boat who is distraught because she packed along too many evening costumes. It can't be done. Lucky maidens have a change of toilette for every night on board, and if they are making a stop-over at the end of the voyage, they will find plenty of opportunities to wear the lot of them all over again.

The South always has been a place for stepping out in full evening regalia, and it is all steamed up about the much vaunted "return of elegance."

* * *

WITH REPEAL an accomplished fact, and lots of horse races, dog races, jai alai frontons, regattas and whatnot of the major sports tuning up for a big winter, it behooves a girl to have plenty of sports clothes as well as evening costumes in her trunk.

The ideal Southern wardrobe, in fact, is divided about evenly between ensembles of those two persuasions, with a smaller selection of swimming togs to wear between times.

* * *

IT IS A GOOD thing to remember that dusty pastels are mighty becoming to a richly tanned complexion, and the same thing goes for dead white. Black is becoming to some tans, and makes others look a bit on the jaundiced side. Red is swell on the girl whose skin does not linger at the sunburned flaming state month after month.

It is a fact that crepes, laces and waterproofed velvets are good sailors and train packers, while more diaphonous fabrics get a bit queezy in the face of the elements.

ANOTHER SUN-TELEGRAPH WONDER STORY!
A Story as Thrillingly Different As It is Mysteriously Baffling

WEIRD! The grotesque dance of a hanging corpse . . . the evil shimmering of the Czarina's pearl at the ghastly white throat . . . the horror of the exposed philanderer . . . the almost ghostly vanishing of the man in the lane . . . and a little pile of cigaret stubs in the startling stillness of the house of murder . . . of such is the newest Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph wonder story.

SCOPOLAMIN! When all other methods fail, Officer Carroll and Inspector Anderson turn to science for sorely needed guidance toward a solution of the crime and the arrest of the killer. Questioning, sleuthing, the third degree, all leave them confounded . . . then scopolamin, truth serum, enters the case and starts the chain of amazing revelations that will make you gasp with excitement.

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Work Undone by Sales.
Field Handicaps Berger.
Airbrake Five Recalled.
Non-Playing Coaches.
Colorful Fighter Quits.

Quaker City baseball fans are asked to accept a change in the managership of the Phils as soothing syrup for the wrecking of that club by the sale of star players, but to outsiders it appears that what the Phils need most is new ownership or a shift in policy. Burt Shotton, who has been deposed in favor of Jimmy Wilson, a step decided on many weeks ago but announced officially only yesterday, admittedly was not the best manager in the country in the matter of handling pitchers, but it is hardly just to make him the goat for team failures that were due chiefly to the selling habits of the owners. No manager could win with a club steadily weakened by the peddling of star players over his head for cash.

Jimmy Wilson

You can judge what kind of club Shotton had to start with in 1928 from the fact that of the entire outfit only three members remain in the majors. Since then, Shotton has developed Chuck Klein, Pinky Whitney, Ray Benge, Phil Collins, Don Hurst, Virgil Davis, George Davis, Hal Lee, Harry McCurdy, Roy Hansen, Edgar Holley, Reg Grabowski and more, while acquiring such valuable experienced men as Dick Bartell, Chick Fullis, Jumbo Elliott and others. No other skipper has surpassed that record in a similar period, but how could Shotton keep his club up to a winning standard when Klein, Whitney, Virgil Davis, George Davis, Lee and Benge were sold away from him? The policy of the Philly owners would render the efforts of any manager fruitless.

PARK SEEN AS HURTING BERGER'S AVERAGE

President Emil Fuchs isn't the only man connected with the Boston National League club who thinks Wally Berger will have a good chance to beat out Chuck Klein in the batting averages next season, when Klein will no longer have the advantage of playing half the schedule in the Phils' bandbox park.

Members of the Braves back up Fuchs in the assertion that Berger is as good a hitter as the National League boasts, and they blame the home park for Wally's failure to make a higher average each year. They hold that Braves Field is the league's toughest park for a hitter, mentioning such handicaps as the East wind and the ocean breezes that deaden the ball.

RANKS WILMERDING FIVE ABOVE CELTICS

Buck Gefsky, former Coffey Club floor star, is one basketball authority of the district who insists that the present Rosenblum Celtics are not comparable to the original New York Celtics. Buck writes to express the opinion that the present Celtics do not compare in any way with the first great team of that name, and says a wide edge in favor of the Originals becomes evident to him when he pictures a Nat Holman, a Johnny Beckman, a Horse Haggerty, a much younger Pete Barry and an Eddie Leonard, and measures that array against the Celtic lineup of today.

Buck Gefsky

"And I might add," Gefsky continues, "that the Wilmerding Westinghouse Airbrake five of war days was a better team than either the old or the present-day Celtic club. Those Wilmerding stars, with Homestead Skimmers Campbell, Jackie Adams, Big Ray Dolan, the greatest center of all time, in my opinion, and Roy and Ross Steele, were in the A-1 class, all by themselves. I remember when we, the Coffey Club, played them for the championship of Pittsburgh in 1920 after the war and got beaten by the amazing score of 70 to 39. Imagine! Our club scored 39 points and yet was licked by 31. Yes, sir; Wilmerding was the best club I ever saw."

SUCCESSFUL COACHES WHO NEVER PLAYED

Ralph Cannon, in the Chicago Daily News, comments on the fact that Carnegie Tech's basketball team, which will open its season against West Virginia in Morgantown Saturday night, is coached by another of those men who never played the game they are teaching. He mentions that Max Hannum, the school's publicity man, who is coaching the floor team, never played college basketball, but was an official in the sport for many years. A very efficient one, Pittsburghers will add, and Max is just as capable in his coaching role, though he has been handicaped by a scarcity of good material. A smooth worker in any capacity, Hannum is one of the ablest all-around men connected with college sports anywhere in the country.

Cannon says sometimes a man stars as a player in one sport and as a coach in another. Exhibits are Henry Schulte, a fine football tackle at Washington University and Michigan, who became an outstanding track coach at Nebraska, and Gwinn Henry, who attained success as a football coach at Missouri, though in his days as an active athlete for the University of Texas and the Irish-American A. C., of New York, he had been a track star. One of the greatest, too, with marks of 9 3-5 for 100 yards and 21 1-5 for the 220. Henry won the National

DUQUESNE GRID SQUAD LEAVES FOR HOME

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 3.—The Duquesne University football squad, which defeated Miami University here New Years Day in the second annual Festival of the Palms game, reaped the harvest of its labor and was feted yesterday on all sides.

The Miami University Athletic Association, the city of Miami and Frank Gough, manager of the Alcazar Hotel, the Dukes' headquarters, united in making the final day in Miami an unforgettable one. This morning the Dukes entrain for Pittsburgh and home.

VISIT MIAMI BEACH

The squad spent yesterday morning at the beautiful Roman Pools on Miami Beach. After lunch the boys set out with police escort to visit the points of interest, including the Dauville Casino, Pan-American Airways, the cocoanut groves and the Biltmore. The remainder of the afternoon was passed at sea. In the evening the Dukes attended the dog races at the West Flagler Kennel Club and then were guests at the Southern Club.

Joe Bach, assistant coach, who probably will be named the new head coach and successor to Elmer Layden, will not return north until January 12. Head Coach Layden left with the team today. He has a great deal of work to clear up at Duquesne before leaving for Notre Dame, the last of this month.

DUE HERE FRIDAY

The Duquesne University football party of 40 and 40 followers is due to arrive in Pittsburgh at 1 o'clock Friday morning. Today and tomorrow will be passed aboard trains of the Seaboard and Pennsylvania lines.

Bob Zuppke, Illinois University coach, who aided Miami to get ready for the Dukes; local and visiting newspapermen and Duquesne officials were guests of the Alcazar Hotel at a dinner last night before the party left for the dog races.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 3.—The undefeated Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets, who scored their second victory of the season over the local lacrosse team at Pittsburgh Monday afternoon, will make their debut here tonight when they meet the Brewers in a North American Professional Lacrosse Association game.

Although they lost in both starts in Pittsburgh, the Brewers held the Jackets to camparatively low and close scores, and they are conceded a fair chance of pulling out a home victory at the expense of the Steel City's champions.

The Jackets will leave here tomorrow bound for Chicago, where they are to oppose the Blue Ribbons, American League leaders, on Friday.

Vanities to Play Steubenville Tonight

The Goldenson Vanities will oppose the Steubenville Shamrocks at the South Side Market House tonight. The visiting quintet is considered one of the strongest in the Ohio Valley section and is determined to give the local girls a battle.

CURRY, MORGAN MAY CLASH

By TOM BIRKS

The local commissioner of the United States Soccer Football Association has been notified by the secretary of the governing body that the first round proper of the challenge cup competition will be played Sunday, January 14.

Inasmuch as Morgan has successfully passed through the qualifying rounds and Curry is exempt until the competition proper, it is likely that these elevens will be paired when the draw is made.

Of course, the two Western Pennsylvania teams may be matched with Ohio outfits. Four clubs are still in the Ohio eliminations, and either the Cleveland Slavias or the Shamrocks may be here one week from Sunday.

The governing body of soccer football in the Buckeye state is doing its part to help teams around Cleveland advance in the two national tourneys. It has adopted a rule that a player may play with one club in league competition and with another club in the national tourneys. A like rule was in force over a period of years until a ridiculous piece of soccer legislation revoked it.

With professional teams in Chicago, St. Louis and in many towns down east, it is logical to wield together the most powerful amateur team available if the pros are going to be given any real competition. This is being done in Cleveland this year and it is something that should be done in Pittsburgh next year, unless a professional league is organized here.

Two games in the National Amateur Cup competition will hold the spotlight over the coming week end, Heidelberg and the Riehls clash and Gallatin hooks up with Avella. Soccer managers are hoping for better weather. Every big game this season has been rained on and the financial condition of the teams is low.

FIGHT RESULTS

SPORT VIGNETTES

So Ben Marshall's our new chief of police, eh? . . . 'Member the night down at the Expo Hall, Ben, when Johnny Ray was fighting Johnny Kirk, and there was a riot, and somebody kicked Kirk? . . . Didn't we have the fun, though? . . . But you and your men stepped in and stopped it . . . Before anyone had a chance to pull a gun . . . Well, good luck, Mr. Marshall, and may you always be able to get trouble under control as quickly as you did that night.

Annual denial: . . . That Jock Sutherland is going to leave Pitt to coach at Yale.

Excuse us for laughing, but we saw Joe Savoldi try to wrestle over at the Arena one night recently against Jim Clinstock, and it sort of tickles our risibilities to read that Jack Curley rates him fifth among the heavyweight wrestlers of the world, with Jim Londos, the real champion, sixth, and with Jim Browning first, Ed Don George second, Ray Steele third, and Jagut Singh fourth . . . You'd laugh, too,—but, then, there's no use of the two of us laughing at the same time.

Prosperity item: . . . Eddie Zivic fights five times in a month in California, which is about 10 times as often as he did around here.

Letter from Luke Carney, manager of Eddie and Fritzie Zivic, still campaigning on the Coast, sends their records to date to show that they've won 12 fights out of 14 in California, six by knockouts and six by decisions, with the other two resulting in draws. . . . Eddie has lost only two decisions in his professional career, both disputable, to Howard Scott, of St. Louis, in his first start, and to Battling Gizzy, last March. . . . . Fritzie has not been beaten since he dropped a bout to Jerry Clements in October, 1932. . . . Between them they've engaged in 47 professional bouts, won 22 by knockouts, 20 on decisions, fought two draws and lost three. . . . Luke says they're hot stuff on the Coast, and when they return here they'll be attractions in main bouts.

Elmer Layden is due for so many banquets that he ought to be pretty well fed up on Pittsburgh by the time he leaves to take over his new duties at Notre Dame early next month. —HARRY KECK.

Simmons Accepts Terms With Chisox

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—(INS.)—An expected controversy between Al Simmons, star batsman of the American League, and the Chicago White Sox over signing of his contract was thwarted today when J. Louis Comiskey, president of the club, announced that the Milwaukeean has signed.

Comiskey refused to divulge the contract figure, but said Al had signed for two years at less than the $33,333.33 he was getting when he came to the White Sox from the Athletics. Simmons was believed to have signed for $27,500 a year

TEXAS RIDERS WIN

MEXICO, D. F., Jan. 3.—(AP.)—The Texas polo team captained by Cecil Smith won its final game here yesterday, defeating a Mexican team composed of Army officers, 6 to 3, in an exhibition.

COLLEGE MEN RAP WALLACE

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—The attack that Henry Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, made against college football, branding it a "racket," was answered last night by Maj. John L. Griffith, president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and commissioner of athletics in the Western Conference. He said, in part:

"Secretary Wallace may be an authority on pigs, cows and corn, but it is a question as to whether his training in the field of agriculture qualifies him to speak with authority on educational subjects, including college athletics.

"After all, college athletics is entitled to scientific treatment, and a man who gives his opinion that college football is a 'racket' apparently has not taken time to gather the facts on which to base his conclusion."

Promoter Charges Mat Bouts 'Fakes'

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—The New York State Athletic Commission today had before it a signed statement by John Hassen Pfefer, formerly connected with Jack Curley in wrestling promotion, that the winner of wrestling matches was decided before the men entered the ring and the grunting and groaning inside the ropes was merely an "act."

As a result, the Commission has called before it Curley, Tom Packs, Dick Shikat, Strangler Lewis and others to deny, if they desire, the charges. They will appear next Tuesday.

Members of the Commission did not comment on the charges, but a Commission official pointed out that wrestling matches in New York State have been billed as "exhibitions" for years and intimated that the matter would be placed "on file" after each side has had a chance to present its case.

BURT SHOTTON REPLACED BY CATCHER

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—To Catcher Jimmy Wilson, a native son who made good in the "big time," went the job of building the Phillies from the second division baseball outfit to a National League pennant contender.

"Meet the new manager," was President Gerald Nugent's announcement to newspapermen that the flashy receiver, obtained from the St. Louis Cardinals a few weeks ago, had been signed to a two-year contract as player-manager, succeeding Burt Shotton.

SHOTTON FREE AGENT

Shotton, manager for the last six seasons, was made a free agent, but there was no announcement of the disposition of the two years his contract still has to run. Reports were heard that the he may be signed by the Cincinnati Reds, or that he might return to the Cardinals organization.

A seasoned veteran at 33, Wilson is expected to develop the Phils to a much higher rating than the seventh place which was their lot last season. He disclosed no plans, but did acknowledge that he would take over, himself, active direction of the hurling staff, a department in which the Phils have been weak for years. He said:

"I'm delighted at the opportunity to pilot the Phils. It's great to have such a job, particularly in your home town.

"I don't have any plans or trades in mind. I haven't had a chance to talk things over with Gerry yet. Perhaps we will do something.

"Right now, all I can say is we'll have two rules on our team. They are 12 o'clock and hustle. Players must be in by midnight and on the field they must hustle every minute.

"Since I will be playing-manager, I will need two coaches. Dick Bartell will continue as captain.

TO HANDLE HURLERS

"As far as the pitchers are concerned, I'll handle them myself. I don't know much about the squad, but I'll be getting acquainted with records and performances until we leave for the South."

Wilson's elevation brings the number of playing pilots in the big leagues to a half dozen. Along with Jimmy are Bill Terry, of the New York Giants; Mickey Cochrane, newly-appointed manager for the Detroit Tigers; Joe Cronin, of Washington; Charley Grimm, of the Chicago Cubs, and Frankie Frisch, of the Cardinals. The list may reach eight with Lou Fonseca and Rogers Hornsby, who are on the border-line.

MACPHAIL RETICENT

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Larry MacPhail, president of the Cincinnati Reds, guardedly admitted late yesterday that he was in town to make a player deal, but refused to divulge the identity of the player or players involved. He likewise declined to state the name of the club with which he hoped to do business.

In two other points, however, he was decidedly positive and, in fact emphatic. He was not, he said, permitting "other people" to pick his manager. He was not, he added, going to trade Chick Hafey. He said with regards to Burt Shotton, deposed manager of the Phillies:

"The Philadelphia papers have been appointing Burt Shotton as my manager. All I can say in this respect is that, when the time comes, I'll appoint my own manager—and the selection may surprise a few people."

COLUMBIA GRIDDERS WIN PLAUDITS OF NATION

LIONS TO HEAD FOR NEW YORK TONIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—The football team that went to bed at 10:30 every night on a long cross-country trek so it might cause the greatest upset in Rose Tournament history—Columbia's 30—went ahead reaping its reward in acclaim today.

Southern California, which likes its football dished up "well done," continued to praise and entertain Coach Lou Little's team that beat Stanford, 7 to 0, New Years Day.

TOUR STUDIOS

After a luncheon and tour of one of Hollywood's picture plants yesterday, the Lions went agrarian today and planned to tour Southern California's citrus grove sections before turning eastward tonight.

But two of the 30 were missing. They were Owen McDowell, first string end, and Tommy Tomb, second string quarterback, both of whom contributed to victory. They were flying east in the hope of getting to New York in time for the start of the basketball season. McDowell is captain of Columbia's quintet. They left here last night and hoped to span the country in 20 hours.

Bobby Grayson, ace of the Stanford team, played the entire last half of the Rose Bowl game with two broken ribs, it was revealed today. He told the team trainer it was "only a muscle bruise."

Joe Richavich, star tackle for the Lions, was wondering if he hadn't found a thorn in the bowl of roses. The question arose as to whether he sacrificed a year of eligibility to play in the game against Stanford.

Richavich was ineligible through the regular season of 1933, but regained good scholastic standing in time to make the trip west. He will be eligible next fall; but the question of 1935 will have to be settled when the team gets home.

STAR GETS MOVIE TEST

Coach Lou Little was reluctantly inclined to believe Joe would have only one more year on the basis of the fact that the annual game, while played on the first day of 1934, is technically a part of the 1933 season.

Cliff Montgomery, Lion quarterback, was given a screen test, but whether he will be offered a contract remains to be seen.

LIONS PLAYED UNDER WRAPS, CORUM SAYS

By BILL CORUM
International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 3.—The bristling little Columbia Lions, who wrote one of the most brilliant chapters in the long history of football in the murk and mud of the Rose Bowl on New Years Day, tonight will turn their faces toward the East and head for New York.

They were a happy but not cocky bunch of kids, as they packed away their souvenirs of the "great adventure," because they play their football on the field and when the game is finally over they have the poise and balance to turn their minds to other things.

Still not a one of them who made this trip, nor any one of us in the party of 60 who took the long trek from Manhattan to the "Glory Hole" in the storm-swept arroyo under the big bridge in Pasadena, will ever forget it.

WHAT A DAY

What a host of glorious memories will come to these young men in the years to come, when they chance upon a tattered blue and cardinal covered program in some half-forgotten bureau drawer? There, they will say to themselves as their eyes mist a little and they instinctively throw back their shoulders, was a day.

And there, my friends, was a day!

Even I, an allegedly hard-boiled sports writer, whose almost daily job of work it is, to sit in at these major athletic struggles, am carrying back some lasting memories from that amazing football game on an amazing day.

I'll remember a noisy Columbia rooter, whose big voice rose above the bedlam of the Stanford cheering, as he turned his face up to the working press, where sat the California scribes who had accused Stanford of selecting Pomona High School for it Rose Bowl rival, and bellowed:

"So this is Pomona!"

CARS SINK IN MUD

Garden walls and the eaves of houses and coppices and rocks and what not came rolling down the mountains like dice out of a box. Cars bogged down and gradually sunk in the mud, not to the hub caps or running boards, but to the seats.

And with it all the playing field in the Bowl was in remarkably good shape in view of the fact that it went through all that storm uncovered. I have been asked a hundred times how I think the game would have come out if it had been played in dry footing, as 17 of the 19 Rose Bowl games have been.

My answer has been that I didn't know. Never having seen this Stanford team on the dry I couldn't tell. But it must also be remembered that nobody out here has yet seen Columbia on the dry. This much I do know. That the shrewd and resourceful Montgomery, played always to protect his seven points, once he had them, never really uncovered Little's full bag of tricks.

That touchdown on which Monty foxed the entire Stanford team into chasing him, the decoy, while Barabas went his serene, untouched and unhurried way to the score, was only one of several such that the Columbia quarterback had up his sleeve.

But most of the others were passes and laterals, calling for deft and unerring handling of a heavy soggy ball, and Monty wisely left them alone, figuring that seven points on such a field was enough.

Chillysauce

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Jimmy Wilson, new manager of the Phillies, was in line for the same berth many years ago, but James, then a youngster loaded with vim and vigor, was more concerned about playing under another. . . . A soccer star in his day, Jimmy rendered brilliant service under the baseball banner of Arthur Fletcher. . . . Playing in the notorious Baker Bowl is not the most desirable job in baseball, but Wilson always relished his task.

After Jim had been "promoted" to the Cardinals and world series glory, I talked with him about his early days in Philly. He remarked:

"It is nicer to be with a winner, but I can truthfully say that I never went into a contest wearing a Philadelphia uniform in which I thought we had any worse than an even chance of winning."

Wilson's smart catching in the 1931 world series was a big factor in the Cardinals stirring triumph over the Macks. In the previous year, Connie's band was making a runaway race of the series when Jimmy, then a casualty, hobbled into action long enough to help his club win two games. . . . He tutored Gus Mancuso, who pulled an important oar as the Giants won the 1933 flag.

George (Whitey) Randour, Villanova's captain and great halfback in the successful season just passed, has left his McDonald home to return to his studies. . . . The tow-haired ball carrier whom Pop Warner tagged as the fastest back of the season, also did the punting and passing for Harry Stuhldreher's team. . . . . It's strange that so many all-America pickers miss boys like Randour and Cliff Battles in making their choices. . . . . Whitey, as a member of the track team at Villanova, went under 10 seconds in the 100-yard dash. His kid brother, Hubert, is a promising sophomore at Pitt. The older brother has an Army appointment which he is considering.

The Sun-Telegraph carried an article shortly after the close of the world series which indicated Burt Shotton would not be in charge of the Phillies this year. Burt succeeded in getting a three-year contract from Gerry Nugent's predecessors at the end of his good season of 1932, but the Phillies flopped all over the place last summer and were just a couple of jumps ahead of the Sheriff when the Quaker owners decided on a change.

Wonder what's become of Senor Adolfo Luque, who gave the world series a stirring touch and then took off for the troubled Pearl of the Antilles? . . . Oh well, a revolution or two isn't much in the life of one who has braved the megaphone assaults of Red Mason . . . Dolf found it hard to win at the Oakland Orchard when Red had his cash down on the home team.

Paul Waner has gone in for wildcat hunting in the Everglades of Florida . . . The little gent with the big punch seems to have a keen eye at any game. He plunked a wildcat in a tree with .22-caliber pistol, according to a reliable report.

LOCAL VARSITY FIVES DRILL FOR TESTS

By JESS CARVER

Temple, of Philadelphia; Valparaiso, of Indiana, and West Virginia, of same, are loading up basketball punches to be tossed in the direction of Pitt, Duquesne and Carnegie Tech varsities Saturday night. Said varsities are not exactly asleep, either; in fact, judging from the activity to be discerned about the various camps, it will not come as any great surprise should the local teams score a clean sweep Sat'day evening.

The toughest tasks are ahead for Pitt and Tech. The Panthers, who've played six major games already against big league opponents (Georgetown, Purdue, Butler, Northwestern, Minnesota and Ohio State), will be out seeking their sixth consecutive triumph over the Owls. They'll also be making their second defense of the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference crown. The first test they met successfully when they defeated Georgetown.

TECH FACES TEST

Carnegie Tech is to make its 1934 debut against the West Virginians. Crippled by the loss of a teamload of stars by graduation and handicapped further by the passing through ineligibility of Capt. Lou Jagnow, the Tartans must meet the Mountaineers on their own floor. West Virginia, in its lone game to date, evidenced pitentia, strength. It beat a veteran West Virginia Wesleyan team, which, according to competent observers, carried plenty of punch.

Coach Max Hannum, of the Plaid, who has been spending his time during the past month with a varied assortment of experiments, is having particular trouble lining up capable forward strength. He'll have Ted Rigg and Capt. Red Silverman at the guards, and Johnny Ewalt, another veteran, at center; but, so far, his forward alignment has been more or less hit and miss. It looks now as if Paul Gibson and Joe Macalka would get the first call.

The Dukes are taking their game with Valparaiso Saturday night more seriously than would be imagined. The Hoosiers were added to the schedule last week. They are practically unknown hereabouts, but the fact that they hail from Indiana, basketball's hotbed, makes them worthy of real concern.

ANOTHER FOR WILLIGS

The crack McKeesport Willigs, of the County League, continue on their merry way, knocking off the college varsities. Last night they nailed Waynesburg for the second time this season. The score was 36 to 34.

At the end of the half, the collegians were ahead by a five-point margin, but the Willigs caught 'em as the second period got under way and once out in front, remained there. The lineup:

FIVE COACHING JOBS OPEN

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—The business of filling football coaching jobs is going along nicely, but there were at least five first-rate positions open today.

In the East, Dartmouth still has to replace Jackson Cannell, who resigned, and Duquesne has not yet named a successor to Elmer Layden. Reg Root has not been let out of Yale, but reports persist that there will be someone else preparing the Bulldog for its battles in 1934.

Down South three schools are looking about for new leaders. North Carolina is after a man to replace Chuck Collins, whose contract was not renewed, and over at Austin, Tex., where the University of Texas is located, almost every prominent coach in the land, whether attached or unattached, has been mentioned as the successor to Clyde Littlefield, resigned. Chet Wynne signed up at the University of Kentucky, so Alabama Poly is in the market.

The situation started to clear up when Layden, member of Knute Rockne's "Four Horsemen," signed to take charge at Notre Dame as athletic director and head football coach. When Layden went in at South Bend, Heartly (Hunk) Anderson and Jesse Harper went out. Anderson celebrated New Years Day by putting his signature on a three-year document at North Carolina State, replacing another former Notre Dame star, John P. (Clipper) Smith.

Kentucky let Harry Gamage go, and obtained the services of Wynne, also one of the many former Notre Dame players in the coaching business.

STEELERS DOWN RANKIN HIGH

By JULIUS LEVIN

The scholastic basketballers, members of the W. P. I. A. L., put in their final big night of pre-championship campaign competition, with a minimum of upsets and a maximum of action. The title races in both the City League and the 19 sections of the W. P. I. A. L. get under way Friday. City League quintets, save Perry, were idle yesterday.

In one of the outstanding contests played last evening, Bill Campbell's Homestead five defeated Rankin, 28 to 26, in a nip-and-tuck battle. Sullivan, Homestead forward, was the high point man of the contest, with three field goals and as many fouls.

Perry, the lone City circuit team to get into the action, doubled the score on Ben Avon, winning, 36 to 18. Swisvale, under Ed Paulie, nosed out East Pittsburgh, 19 to 16; Ambridge had a tussle on its hands before winning over Butler, 31 to 29; Aliquippa took things comparatively easy in beating back Coraopolis, 36 to 23.

New Brighton served the hapless Beaver passers another lacing, winning 36 to 13; Monessen beat Canonsburg, 30 to 17, and Waynesburg bowed to Mt. Lebanon, 31 to 30. Washington downed McDonald, 23 to 15; Central Catholic won over Sewickley, 41 to 31; Tarentum took over Ford City, 33 to 27; Oakmont defeated Turtle Creek Union, 23 to 17; Charleroi won over Bentleyville, 28 to 22; Arnold trimmed Kittanning, 27 to 14; Uniontown crushed East Bethlehem, 40 to 8, and Mafs won from Millvale, 20 to 17.

T.H.McGraw, Partner In Tie for Golf Lead

PINEHURST, N. C., Jan. 3.—(Universal.)—The Tin Whistles golf tournament yesterday resulted in a tie for first place when the team of C. W. Mansfield, Brookline, Mass., and T. H. McGraw, Jr., Pittsburgh, finished 5 up on par, matching the score of W. B. Calkins, Philadelphia, and W. W. Windle, Millbury, Mass.

Sandlot Gridders In Finale Sunday

The selection of a playing site for the Rox Rangers-Aliquippa Indians football game, to be played Sunday afternoon, will be made at a meeting of team officials late today.

The game, bringing together finalists in the Sport Shop Leagues in a title battle, will mark the close of the sandlot football season here. The rivalry is keen, and a close, hard game is anticipated.

KING TUT ENDS NOTABLE RING CAREER

A notable ring career has ended with a decision just reached by Henry Tuttle, known to the nation's fight fans as King Tut, to call it quits and hang up his gloves, after eight years of professional milling. He's only 28, but his last two fights on the Pacific Coast convinced him he was slipping, so rather than be punched around and possibly suffer a lasting injury he has married, invested his savings in a San Francisco hotel, and hereafter will devote his time to its direction.

King Tut

Though he never won a championship, this odd mixture of Norwegian, Irish and English blood could beat many of the men who did, and his career was a colorful one, in which he fought from coast to coast. One of his troubles was his poundage—too heavy for the lightweight class and too light for the welterweight division. Another was his unorthodox style, which caused titleholders to steer clear of him. Tut's record is studded with sensational performances. For one thing he was the only man ever to knock out Billy Petrolle, doing the trick in one round at St. Paul on February 2, 1931, though Petrolle turned the tables in four rounds at New York 25 days later. On September 12, 1929, Tut gave Petrolle such a terrific beating in 10 rounds at Detroit that Jack Hurley, Billy's manager, walked around the ring confiding to friends that the Fargo Express never would fight again. Petrolle came back, but only after a long lay-off.

Shriners' Game Nets New Low Of $5,000

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Crippled children of the Shriners' Hospital benefitted to the extent of only some $5,000 from the East-West all-star football game played here New Years Day, according to William Coffman, director of the event.

The 30,000 persons who braved chilly weather and threatening skies to witness the contest paid the smallest gate in the nine years it has been staged, Coffman said. The previous low was in 1927, when the net profit was $8,666.

During the first eight years of the competition a total of nearly $250,000 was turned over to the hospital an average of more than $30,000 a game, figures show. Until last year, choice tickets brought $5. This year they sold for $3 top.

Change Is Made In Boxing Card

A change has been made in the middleweight bouts for the card of 10 amateur bouts, five of them five-rounders and five three-rounders, at McKeesport, tomorrow night. Bill Schwerin was booked to meet John Fleming, but instead will box Andy Todd, while Fleming will take on Steve Levandowski. Other bouts arranged include:

Jimmy Ferry vs. Joe Clark, Frank Vavra vs. Chuck Horvich and George Myer vs. Joe Verducci.

The Marion Hill A. C. will stage a show of six amateur bouts and a wrestling exhibition in the Greystone Gardens, New Brighton, tomorrow night, to raise funds for gymnasium equipment. Vic Yarosz will box Joey Evans, Howdy Mason will oppose Paul Kraynack and Frank Catanese will take on Kid Jekes in boxing bouts, while Tom Rusky and Ray Hours are booked for the mat bout.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Promoter Ed Douglas has announced the scheduled fight between Johnny Risko and Jimmy Maloney, would be held next Monday night instead of tomorrow. Douglas said inability to transfer seats back to the Miami Coliseum from the Moore football park in time for the fight resulted in the postponement.

MIAMI HORSE OWNERS STRIKE

By FRED KEATS
International News Service.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 3.—Horsemen are on strike here as a protest against the Florida State Racing Commission's activity in investigating an alleged doping case. They refused to enter their horses for today's racing at Tropical Park and it was impossible to fill the card until late yesterday.

The trouble started when the horse, Kiltamond, which raced Monday, was given a saliva test, the result of which has not been made known yet. Following the test the commission assigned 24 inspectors—one for each of the 24 barns at the track here—to keep constant watch.

This aroused the ire of the horsemen and they made a silent protest by refusing to come near the secretary's office to make entries. Racing Secretary J. B. Campbell then made frantic efforts to fill the card. He rushed over to Hialeah and begged the horsemen there to come to his assistance but with meager results. The closing time for entries here is 10:30 a. m., but it was not until 2 p. m. that enough entries were obtained to make up today's card.

Bambino Begins Indoor Training

New Yorkers were given that assurance today with the announcement that Babe Ruth, mighty Sultan of Swat, will don shorts this afternoon and go through the motions of training while cameras click and sports writers ask their questions.

Officially it's the Babe's annual gymnasium debut to prepare for another season of baseball, but to sports writers it's the opening of the annual salary battle with Col. Jake Ruppert, owner of the Yankees.

They're off!

TRADE TRENDS UP AT TURN OF YEAR

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Business continues to move haltingly forward under the increased stimulus of governmental spending.

Mr. Rukeyser

Adjusted indexes of steel production, power consumption and automobile output indicated that the trend was slightly upward at the turn of the year.

Building in December, according to preliminary figures, was proceeding at the most active pace since January, 1931. This represented the effect of letting public works contracts. This stimulus will continue at an increasing rate at least until the middle of the year.

To get the maximum good results it would be desirable to use public works to prime the pump. If, on the other hand, they are accompanied by no increase in private construction, the beneficial results will of course be restricted.

URGE COST CUT

There has been some criticism that the government has tended to keep up or increase building costs, which were already somewhat out of line with the general price level. Hard-boiled economists urge getting construction costs down in order to attract private demand, especially for better houses for men in the low-income groups.

In this connection, the plans of the Department of the Interior for setting up in the near future 29 demonstration subsistence farming villages, near industrial centers, may offer an opportunity to test our suggestions for fabricated houses. This entails briefly the conception of doing for houses what Ford did for automobiles.

Incidentally, E. R. Stettinius, Jr., who recently resigned as vice president of the General Motors Corporation to become vice chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, has long been an enthusiastic advocate of low priced fabricated housing.

MISLEADING BOOKKEEPING

The fear that there is no substantial pent up demand for capital goods grows out of misleading corporate bookkeeping. Numerous companies, including the railroads, have made vastly insufficient charge-offs for obsolescence. Accordingly, using ineffecient machinery at a big operating and maintenance costs, they are in effect paying for modernization without getting it. RFC loans to the railroads for the purchase of equipment help to break the deadlock. Industry, too, is short of up-to-date modern equipment. Much of the stuff now carried on the books as assets ought to be scrapped.

Business for 1933 as a whole was a little better than 1932. The swings between the high and low points in 1933 were unusually wide. Perhaps the biggest percentage change was in the basic steel industry, which, starting at an unusually low level, showed a gain of 70 per cent.

RACKETEERS VENTURESOME

New restrictive legislation makes the respectable financial community unusually timid, but the racketeers are perfectly willing to show venturesomeness. Recently it has been fashionable for a number of so-called market advisory services to solicit discretionary speculative accounts, for which they charge 25 per cent of the profits if any. Since they do not share the losses, the managers have an incentive to take broad chances with other people's money. Lay investors should be wary of signing blank checks for strangers.

In some instances such accounts have been operated by unscrupulous persons who participated in pool manipulations at the expense of the funds which they purport to manage. They acquire with their clients' money a substantial amount of the stock which the pool operators are working, and in consideration for this they receive for their personal account a call, or option, on a number of the shares at the prevailing market price, getting a free ride in case of an advance. It has been their practice to sell their own stock on a rally, but to retain their clients' holdings until an inevitable reaction sets in after the manipulative effort has drawn to a close.

STOCK MARKET TONE STEADY TO FIRM

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Financial markets today turned to Congress and the President's message for inspiration.

While nothing appeared in the early Potomac perspective which could be construed as unduly whetting the speculative appetite, equity prices maintained a fairly steady to firm demeanor. Traders continued to display a cautious attitude, however, and there was no rush for the majority of stock favorites. Grains and cotton improved and the dollar moved in a rather narrow groove in foreign exchange dealings as the domestic gold price held at its previous figure. Bonds were again in moderate demand.

Stock trading in the morning hours was extremely dull and continued equally diffident after Congress convened. Scattered advances included Union Pacific with a gain of 2 points and Allied Chemical and United States Smelting, up nearly as much. Small gains were shown by United States Steel, American Commercial Alcohol, American Smelting, Chrysler, New York Central, Johns-Manville, Westinghouse, Continental Can and Western Union. American Telephone and many others were about unchanged.

Of principal interest to the financial district was the President's annual budget message, which was expected to be read to Congress tomorrow. There were many conjectures regarding the probable estimate of the deficit which the message might contain. Some banking quarters figured the recovery appropriations which the Chief Executive will ask from Congress at between six and eight billion dollars.

So far as Wall street itself is concerned, the consensus is that there will not be a great deal of excitement in the present Congressional meeting and that the legislators, as a whole, will be disposed to go along with the President in whatever further recovery measures he proposes. Politico-financial observers point out that any possible insurgent outbreak probably would be much restrained by thoughts of the fall elections.

While traders generally may be expected to watch closely recommendations which the President will make to Congress from time to time, most usually well-informed financial circles believe there will be no immediate change in the gold-buying program, and some market commentators are predicting quiet and steady markets throughout the present Congress.

Trade analysts, although not getting too far from the congressional picture, continued to view optimistically signs of better spring business. Few of the reviewers believed there would be such a feverish demand for goods of all descriptions as there was last spring. The reason given by some was that last year inventories and stocks were below minimum levels and that necessary replacements brought an upturn that was out of the ordinary. In recent months, it was said, stocks of goods have been nearer normal levels and the nearby turnover may depend upon the current purchasing power of both consumers and industry.

MARKET SHOWS NO WEAKNESS IN NEW YEAR

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The stock market closed last week, and last year, firmly, with the average about a point above the close of the preceding week. Most observers considered the action favorable, and I see in the usual signs little that suggests any important weakness.

For example, not only did the averages close strong, but the market was broad, the great majority of issues traded showed gains, and the volume of trading was up, though moderate.

We may add that the most active stocks were mostly higher, and that these constituted a somewhat larger proportion of the total trading than has been the case in recent weeks.

UNCERTAINTY PREVAILS

Yet, despite such bullish indications, I do not get the impressions that any long-sustained rise is beginning here. It seems more likely that the market will work only a little higher on this move, before dipping, and then backing and filling until some of the existing uncertainties are removed.

For one thing, the market has thus far shown no tendency to get up momentum. The Thursday one-day pushup saw the volume of trading decline and had no carry through.

I am inclined to doubt that the technical position was much improved by the December reaction, and the volume of brokers' loans has increased at a rate out of proportion to the recent little rise.

But more fundamental is the condition of uncertainty, which should make for relatively narrow swings rather than sustained moves. Congress is about to begin operations. Already the Senators of the "silver states" are on the war path for changes in our money and those who can remember how disturbing the "free silver" issue was in 1895-96, will realize what this may mean.

Then, too, the whole social reform program remains a threat to profits and the profit system. "Collectivism" and "social control" of business are an important part of the administration's program. If these things work they would certainly not help the stock market. If they cannot work, we are trying vain things and the process of correcting mistakes would cause confusion for a time.

STEEL BUYING HEAVY

Another consideration is that there may be some temporary reaction from the year-end spurt in industrial activity. For example, steel buying has been heavy in anticipation of the January price advance.

But despite these uncertainties, the fact remains that the government's drive to stimulate business by public works and distributing checks among farmers and CWA members is now nearing its peak. The anutomobile manufacturers are counting on some of these funds going into motor car purchases, and are getting under way for the new year. Other industries will be "stimulated."

All the advance opinion is to the effect that the administration will have control over Congress, and that the President continues to retain the confidence of a majority of the people. Just at present various business leaders are expressing themselves as satisfied with their codes.

So we ought to have a period in here somewhere when, but for monetary uncertainties and the difficulties of public finance, things will look pretty good to the average man.

THE BOARD OF PU

MAIL BOX BAN ON CIRCULARS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP.)—Postmaster General Farley last night ruled against the use of letter boxes, or even letter slots in doors of homes, as receptacles for such mailable matter as statements of accounts, sales bill, advertising circulars and the like.

Complaints against having letter boxes stuffed with bills and circulars was given as the reason by the Postmaster General. When the 3-cent postage rate went into effect many large utility companies and stores utilized their own messengers in delivering bills and statements.

The 3-cent postage rate recently was reduced to two cents on local letters.

Carriers were instructed by Farley to remove from letter boxes and other receptacles mailable matter on which no postage has been paid and carry it to the post-office to be held for postage.

RELIEF BOARD ORDERS COAL

A request for 35,000 tons of coal for this month to be distributed to needy families has been made by the Allegheny County Relief Board, its director, George Mills, announced today. He said:

"Since December 11 we have distributed 15,000 tons of coal to needy families in the city and county. There is no doubt that we will receive this new order. We will distribute coal throughout the winter months."

It is estimated that Pennsylvania will receive about 1,200,000 tons of coal, which is purchased through the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation for needy unemployed. The coal being used in this district is being bought from local dealers.

OPERATOR 13

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

By morning the "foot race" was on; the Rebel army had left Petersburg and was hot-footing it into the West; and Sheridan, in advance, thundered along beside it with his matchless cavalry. For four terrible days Operator 13 was in the saddle day and night, galloping ahead with Custer's vanguard, during which journey battles were fought behind her, and Richmond was on fire, and Petersburg lay stunned and desolate amid a horror of earthworks and ruined houses.

Out of the burning Confederate capital galloped Gen. Gary with his gray-jackets—through Cary street and down Fourteenth street to Mayo's bridge, where Capt. Sullivane stood waiting to blow it up.

Gary saluted him. "All over," he said; "good-bye; blow her to hell," and trotted his horse and his horsemen across the last remaining bridge.

Watch Appomattox

Behind them, the loosened mob bellowed, roared, cursed and fought, plundering the burning city, and the first company of Union cavalry was already galloping into Main street.

On the fifth day of Operator 13's tireless scouting, a courier from Sharpe found her and Babcock at Burkeville, and bade her watch the Appomattox. She sent back word that Johnston's army was not there; that no Confederate troops from Petersburg had passed through; that Sheridan had covered the whole West with one vast screen of cavalry which nobody could penetrate, and that she would ride at once to the river he mentioned and patrol it with Jack Babcock's scouts.

A day or two later, one of the scouts came in slightly wounded and reported that Lee's whole army was crossing the Appomattox at High Bridge, and that he had seen Vespasian Chancellor and another scout galloping ahead toward the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The girl was deathly weary, but she took Billy Dix and rode out to see for herself what was going on across the Appomattox River.

Others had already discovered it, two "Jessie Scouts" and some of Custer's advanced vedettes. These had three prisoners—cavalrymen of Fitzhugh Lee—who admitted freely that the retreating army was making for the Peaks of Otter.

Located Gailliard

When Operator 13 clearly understood, she sent Billy Dix galloping to the nearest field telegrapher beyond Farnville with a message to Col. Sharpe, at G. H. Q.:

"Rebel cavalry have crossed Appomattox River at High Bridge heading for Blue Ridge. Their infantry and wagons now crossing. Will notify Gen. Sheridan. Chancellor and probably Gailliard are with Lee's advance, scouting out back roads to the mountains. Will try to stop and capture them.

"Operator 13."

And to Sheridan she sent Babcock with a note:

"Rebel army now crossing High Bridge and reported making for the Peaks of Otter or White's Gap. Col. Ives' 1st Connecticut Cavalry scouts observing and following movement."

That night she noticed fires burning in the village of Farnville and thought she heard military music and cheering; and sent a scout to learn more about it.

He came back very much excited, saying that those were bonfires and that Gen. Grant was there.

All night long the trample of Ronald Mackenzie's passing cavalry disturbed her rest. She had gloomy dreams, too, of fires on the Peaks of Otter and of death in White's Gap, where she had murdered her own lover with her pistol while Vespasian Chancellor shot her heart to pieces with phantom bullets which she could not feel.

"I hear there is a corduroy forest road somewhere between Appomattox Courthouse and the Lynchburg highway. If this is true it is not shown on any of our military maps. Take some scouts and investigate."

Twenty minutes later she had swallowed some scalding coffee and was riding north by west With Jack Babcock, Billy Dix and Sheridan's chief scout, Campbell, followed by half a dozen headquarters scouts and couriers who had been watching the Richmond and Danville and South Side railroads between Burkeville and Farnville.

The rain had ceased, but the low-lying country had become a vast lake, with all creeks out of their banks and forest flooded. Only the Appomattox River road seemed practicable, and very soon a company of advanced Confederate cavalry fired upon Operator 13 and her scouts, and drove them away from that vicinity helter-skelter.

Wild Ride

But beyond, against the silvery streak in the east, Operator 13 had caught a glimpse of Confederate baggage wagons parking in a tobacco field; and as she and Dix were riding hard to get out of bullet range, she called to him to bear to the right where a low range, thickly wooded, ran parallel with the river. Up to this their horses bounded, and on top came suddenly into an old corduroy road obstructed by rotted logs, brush, ferns and windfalls.

Two hundred yards to the eastward, straight down this ancient lumber road, they saw two horsemen picking their way toward them, and a company of gray-jacketed cavalry and some engineers in distant perspective, evidently clearing the road of all the heavier fallen timber.

Babcock cantered up to join them followed presently by Campbell and all the scouts.

"By jingo!" exclaimed Campbell. "There is a road, and here it is! I'm off to little Phil!"

As he whirled his horse, Babcock said to him: "Tell them we're trying to stop these fellows for a few minutes!"

End of World

Where a big white oak tree had crashed down across the corduroy and now lay buried in ferns amid its rotting abatis, Operator 13 led her scouts, dismounted them and detailed a man to every four horses.

She said quite calmly to Dix: "There's no particular reason for killing any more of them if we can scare them back. The Petersburg and Richmond armies are fast in a trap. This is the end of the world for them."

The scouts, standing with drawn revolvers behind the fallen giant and other standing trees, looked at the girl with perplexed and doubtful grins, but Billy Dix said loudly: "You're right, ma'am; let the poor, starving devils run home. They're all in the same box now."

"Sure, ma'am; they'll take it for an ambush."

"Anyway," she said, "if they fire on us I'll talk to them."

"A parley," remarked Dix, "is better than a volley just now. Here they come, ma'am. Watch out they don't gobble us!"

She sent scouts out in the woods on either flank, and when they were posted she wiggled through the fallen branches, leveled her pistol and fired five shots high over the heads of the two Confederate horsemen, who now had advanced almost within range.

The Effect

The effect on them and on the startled troopers and engineers beyond them was instantaneous; the two horsemen spurred into the woods; the cavalry—a company only—came cantering forward, halted and fired from their saddles.

"Fire high!" cried Operator 13, excitedly, and the scouts around her sent a volley of pistol shots into the treetops.

Far away down the road the engineers' axes ceased to flash and whack; the gray-jacketed horsemen deployed and came creeping toward the fallen oak tree.

Operator 13, holding her white handkerchief fluttering above her head, stepped outside the windfall and walked a little way down the road, knee-deep in ferns. And she had not taken a dozen steps before two horsemen jumped their horses out of the roadside thicket and landed on the rotten corduroy not more than 30 yards from her.

They looked thin and sick and shabby, but the girl recognized them instantly, though it was evident they thought they had to do with some boyish Federal cavalryman.

"It's no good your coming up this road," said the girl earnestly. "I walked out here to tell you."

"The ragged, hawk-faced scout laughed. "Little boy," he said, "yuh run home to yuh daddy an' leave this hyah war to old folks lak we-all." He continued to urge his bony horse forward and Gailliard rode behind him, both looking over her head at the abatis beyond.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Early morning exercise should be limited to five minutes. Nobody is particularly peppy then; it has been too long a time since last night's feeding; furnace all out of fuel.

Young girls are always demanding information on standard weights and measurements, anxious to do figure remodeling. Isn't worth while, during growth and development. At 15 nearly all girls are gangling and flapperish. Excessive thinness calls for a diet rich in milk, cream, cereals, with lean meats, plenty of vegetables and fruit. Overweight means that the diet contains a surplus of sugar, starches and fats, but they should not be entirely deleted, merely cut down. The plump ducky must go in for outdoor exercise that keeps her on the jump.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS HENRY CLAY WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD ANDREW JACKSON

LEADERS OF POLITICAL FACTIONS IN THE ELECTON YEAR OF 1824

Colliding interests of South, East and West tore the nation into sections. In the presidential campaign of 1824 John Quincy Adams was favorite of the North, Clay in the West, Crawford in Virginia. Jackson, the hero of New Orleans, alone had national appeal, but failed to get the necessary majority. The House decided in a special ballot. The Speaker, Clay, with his vote broke the tie in favor of John Quincy Adams.

During Adams' presidency (1825-1829) Republicans split into Adams-Clay or Nationalistic Republicans (advocating protective tariff, national bank, internal improvements) and the Calhoun-Crawford wing (supporting state rights of the Jeffersonian school).

WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR DEFEATS HAROLD, KING OF ENGLAND (1066)

William the Conqueror, Duke of Normandy, claimed the English crown on alleged bequest of the deceased Edward the Confessor, who had been succeeded by Harold, his brother-in-law. William defeated Harold in the Battle of Hastings and was crowned English King as William I (1066-1087). He first ruled with justice, later treated the English as conquered people. Dividing the land into baronies, he introduced the feudal system of land tenure and services. William, most powerful ruler of his time, warred successfully also against the French. (World History)

COMMUNITY CARE OF DEPENDENT AND HANDICAPPED CHILDREN

Mother with children: Father died, but mother was able to keep the children with her because the state had a mothers' aid law. About 250,000 children receive this form of assistance in the United States.

This boy's legs were absolutely useless. Modern surgery and medicine brought relief after two and a half years of treatment. The same boy healed.

One great merit of the modern school system is the provision for the education of the deaf, the blind and the crippled child. (Problems of Democracy)

VITAMIN B OR WATER-SOLUBLE VITAMIN

Polyneuritis, paralysis of the peripheral nervous system, was caused in the dog (above, left) by a diet lacking vitamin B. It was cured by feeding him tomato juice (right).

Beriberi, a disease prevalent in tropical countries, has the same cause and remedy.

The original vitamin B was found to be a mixture: The anti-neuritic factor was called vitamin F, the other, anti-pellagric, vit. G.

IONIZATION—ELECTROLYSIS—ELECTROPLATING

When acids, bases, salts dissolve, their molecules dissociate to atoms or groups of atoms with the transfer of electrons and become electrically charged, called ions. The positively charged (losing electrons) are cathions; the negative ones (gained electrons) the anions. If direct current is led through electrolyte (solution) cathions (hydrogen, metals) migrate to the cathode (—electrode); the anions (acid-and base-radicals) to the anode (+electrode). This process is called electrolysis (above, left). Electroplating (right)—depositing metal on a conductor—is based upon electrolysis.

DIAGRAM OF A MODERN LOCOMOTIVE AND TENDER (Transportation)

No Nation Can Afford War

Tracing the biscuits back to the oven in Europe we find that nobody wants war unless it shows a profit.

The clearest total of all European wars was summed up by the Rabaloochian king when he yelled:

"Get my hoss and gun. I'm gonna fight the Termagozzians."

His prime minister protested, "But, your majesty, we are not fighting the Termagozzians. We are at war with the Gonkakkeroos."

"I know it," yelled the king, "But I can always whip the Termagozzians."

So the prime checked up the lists to determine the condition of fresh and decayed friendship. He discovered that the two nations had a peace treaty, three non-aggression pacts and a chronic state of secret diplomacy.

"Dear Sir: Our nations have three non-aggression pacts which cancel the same number of peace papers. In addition, we have at least 11 secret treaties promising that our armies will not cross your borders until they get there.

"Therefore, hoping that a war will not interrupt our usual relations, I am delegated to inform you that no violence will be employed after we win the first battle.

"Notify your inhabitants that the Fifteenth Battalion of Imperial Hitch-Hikers are proceeding north to collect rare specimens of butterflies and ferns.

"Firing back at our gentle bullies will be construed as a violation of good intentions and other paving material."

That's how the trouble starts. They commence with whiskbrooms and work up to kitchen mops. When a prime minister says that his nation cannot afford war he has to bite his own elbow to keep from laughing up the sleeve.

No nation can afford war. And few people can afford wine and caviar. But they manage to get it just the same.

The Honeymoon Is Over

It Is Time for the New Democratic Administration to Prepare a Program for Pittsburgh

Some of the circumstances attending the inauguration of Mayor W. N. McNair and the new Democratic administration were rather bizarre. But the comic opera aspect cannot last. The honeymoon is over.

Mr. McNair has been running for office—for all sorts of offices—for a good many years. This is the first time he was elected; so he could not decently be begrudged the good time, the merrymaking, the jubilation that he has been enjoying since November 7. But it is now time to get down to business.

Councilman W. A. Magee was right when he told the Democrats they had no program. They have professed adherence to certain broad principles—commendable principles—but they have submitted no specific plans for putting those principles into effect.

The city is in a rather serious financial condition. Its condition will not be improved by talking generalities, nor by fantastic appeals to the city's employes, creditors and debtors. What is needed is a definite, businesslike, common sense policy. Mr. McNair and his associates should prepare such a policy without further ado.

The Democrats have been brought into power in Pittsburgh by President Roosevelt's popularity and the Republican Organization's stupidity. It is conceivable that President Roosevelt's popularity will wane, and also conceivable—though it looks now like a very remote possibility—that the Republican Organization will get some sense.

Hence it behooves the Democrats, if they hope to retain the support of the people of Pittsburgh, to have something else—good service—on which to fall back when they appeal for votes.

They have a golden opportunity to give good service. Let us hope they will not bungle it.

Crowded Asylums

The State Is Offered An Opportunity in Federal Aid to Relieve Congestion in Hospitals

The Public Charities Association reports that about $13,500,000 will be provided, out of which two million may be used for construction of armories, about one million for state sanitaria under the Department of Health, and approximately ten million for construction at state mental hospitals, institutons for the feeble-minded and penal institutions.

This brings to mind an investigation made by the Sun-Telegraph several years ago which disclosed that the state mental hospital at Warren was so crowded that patients were sleeping in corridors, while congestion at the state school for feeble-minded children at Polk was so great the children in some of the dormitories scarcely had room to move around.

Conditions in at least some of the state asylums apparently have not improved, for it has been proposed to "board out" harmless patients with private families to make room for those requiring constant attention.

The ten million dollars for new construction will be a godsend.

It would be an additional blessing if money should be available for the building of the Western State Psychiatric Hospital, sponsored by Senator Frank J. Harris. The Legislature authorized the hospital in 1931, and the following year the University of Pittsburgh donated a site for it—a tract of 65,000 square feet on the campus at the corner of DeSota and O'Hara streets. Plans have been drawn and the architect chosen. The hospital will accommodate 150 adults and 50 children and have separate out-patient clinics.

Pennsylvania has eight mental hospitals, but no psychiatric hospital. A psychiatric hospital is a special hospital for early diagnosis and treatment of curable nervous and mental diseases.

The purpose of the psychiatric hospital proposed for Pittsburgh is to cure mental disorders in their incipiency and thus save the patients and their families from the sorrow and the Commonwealth from the expense of long commitments to an asylum.

The building of the hospital now is called for by the dictates of humanity. It might be more economical to build now than to postpone construction.

A Great Farming State

Pennsylvania Is Again Revealed as One of the Nation's Most Important Agricultural Areas

We in the cities and mining and manufacturing centers of Pennsylvania need to be reminded now and then that this is a great farming state.

Such a reminder comes today in a report of the State Department of Agriculture, showing how Pennsylvania compared with other states in the production of various kinds of crops last year.

Pennsylvania ranked first in the production of buckwheat and cigar-leaf tobacco, second in hay, fourth in apples and silage corn, fifth in rye and grapes, sixth in pears and peaches, seventh in winter wheat and cherries; thirteenth in corn, fourteenth in oats, and thirteenth in the total value of all crops.

Millions of acres of mountain land in Pennsylvania are unfit for the plow. The tillable area is comparatively small. Pennsylvania has bountiful crops because of the superior ability of its farmers.

American Women

An English Discussion Shows the Danger of Generalizing.

J. W. Drawbell, editor of the London Chronicle, says that English people have an entirely erroneous impression of American womanhood. This impression, he believes, is gained from talking pictures and from tourists.

The American woman of the screen is, he declares, "cute, but terrible," "beautiful, but shrieking." And the American woman who tours England wears "ill-fitting clothes and uncleaned heelless shoes."

But Editor Drawbell, who visited America, insists that American women are really well dressed, intelligent, attractive, alive and vital—and this vitality is apparent in all classes of American women.

"American women," he concludes, "have none of that tired, bored-to-death attitude that you come across so frequently in European cities."

Editor Drawbell is being nice—for he knows there are bored-to-death women everywhere, and vital women everywhere, and cute but terrible women everywhere. And as for women in ill-fitting clothes and heelless shoes—well, they are surely not ALL American women.

They Got What They Ordered!

Some years ago Uncle Sam began calling for income taxes in order to obtain money for his Treasury, and ever since he has been calling for MORE income taxes.

The result has been a disgraceful TAX RACKET—a racket by the Government, with its spying and its oppression of enterprise and of wage and salary earners; and a racket by tax dodgers, who have many methods of evading income taxes.

Canada, on the other hand, said, "Give me a General Manufacturers Sales Tax."

Result—Canada has no objectionable tax racket, the Canadian Treasury pays its obligations without deficits, the national income is stable instead of fitful, and the taxpayers themselves speak of the revenue measure as "the tax nobody feels."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Harlem now has its own tabloid, the Daily Citizen, which is attempting to gloss life with a hi-de-ho in the Black Belt. The section has long been a stronghold of tabloidia, flashy pictures especially catching the fancy of sidewalk sunners along Lenox avenue and under the "Wishing Tree."

A conspicuous event in a Harlem day is the nightly drawings in the gambling game of "numbers." While other tabloids have featured certain numerals construed by natives as "hunches," the new paper pays especial attention to this feverish gambling urge.

Another diversity north of 125th continues to be the "rent party" and its location. These festivities flower Saturday nights and offer the delinquent renters of Harlem flats a chance to catch up with the landlord. The charge is $1 a couple and drinks and dancing are free.

Crap game razorings, despite the legends, are few in Harlem. The populace has shaken off the customs of the cotton fields and levees. Contract bridge reigns in the apartments of Strivers' Row and Sugar Hill where Ethel Waters is the social queen and Duke Ellington the sepia Harry Lehr.

Franklin P. Adams, dean of American columnists, is likely the only one to go to the office daily, read proof and stand-by until the make-up man deposits the last paragraph into the form. In his Evening Mail days he wrote his entire column with a green inked fountain pen. Later, I understand, he mastered the typewriter. Despite a bedside vigilance he has not escaped typographical blunders, yet fewer than the majority of his guild. Adams began contributing to B. L. T.'s column in Chicago and among his own contributors to attain eminence are Deems Taylor, Sigmund Spaeth, Dorothy Parker, George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly.

They sat next table at one of those marbly and glowingly pink tea rooms back of long candy counters on the avenue. They were very young. He was earnestly whispering a plea, the nature of which was not difficult to imagine while fingering something in his vest pocket. Finally she nodded, slyly extended her engagement finger and he slipped on the ring. She looked at it with something trembling inside. And shot him a smile of the richest, swiftest beauty I've ever beheld. Her soul on her lips!

There was an anti-climax, swaying up the avenue with Henry Sell on the omnibus later. A striped awning ribboned out from a brilliantly lit church and policemen were holding back the sidewalk crowds from a strip of scarlet carpet leading to the curb. A lily-livered misanthrope in the seat ahead growled: "Another wretched wedding!"

Katherine Hepburn unconsciously upset a few first nights at the theater on her arrival in New York a few weeks ago. There is a distinct "feel" to audiences among players. Although audiences are a mere blur back of the footlights, performers by uncanny telepathy know when attention is divided. When Miss Hepburn was in a theater there was a constant craning of necks to see her when the lights came on. And thus many lines floundered.

Richard Mansfield, of all actors, was most keenly attuned to the interest of an audience. He could sense neglect or inattention with his back to it and on several occasions stepped out of his part to bluster to the footlights with rebuke.

Don Marquis, perhaps America's best beloved newspaperman, has fully recovered from a blindness that struck him lightning-like while putting finishing touches on a play a year ago. Working at his desk, he was conscious of dimness. Thinking it was merely the arabesques of night coming on, he snapped on a desk light. It remained dark. Eye strain was the sole cause and the rest brought recovery.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

You've No Right to Expect Gratitude

Are you always doing nice things for other people and then getting mad because they aren't grateful?

Of course you are. We're all that way.

Parents, for example. Since time immemorial, parents have been making sacrifices for children—enduring incredible drudgery for children—then growing bitter because the sacrifice and drudgery weren't sufficiently appreciated.

And in these hard days we're all being Santa Claus to somebody. As a consequence of which, nine-tenths of us are packing a grouch because the Other Fellow is ungrateful.

F'instance, those no-account Joneses, living in that terrible shack with all those kids. Remember all we did for the Joneses? Dug down and gave them money we really needed for our own families. Went without that new party dress—gave up that week-end vacation—contributed one of our best blankets—so the Joneses could sleep warm, eat plenty.

And what thanks did we get? Not a thank! Dad Jones proceeded to get pie-eyed. Ma Jones went out and bought herself a permanent. The whole family went on a movie bust, then ordered a radio, on the installment plan! And when we made them send it back they were sore! Actually sore. Never stopped to think how wonderful everybody had been. Never entered their minds to be grateful. Just got sore because we wouldn't do more!

Yes, the Joneses were certainly a life-sized example of Ingratitude. And we all can produce other Exhibits A, equally outrageous concerning which we naturally feel plenty sorry for ourselves.

BUT HAVE WE ANY RIGHT TO FEEL SORRY FOR OURSELVES?

HAVE WE ANY RIGHT TO EXPECT GRATITUDE?

No, we haven't!

IF WE'RE REALLY CIVILIZED, A GOOD DEED SHOULD BE IT'S OWN REWARD.

For a good deed is fun. The best fun there is. And if you give as you should, joyously, eagerly, there's plenty of kick in it, whether the other fellow appreciates it or not. If he's grateful, that's pleasant. But it's his bad luck, not yours, if he isn't. For you've already had your fun!

Giving is also a lucky break. Few are fortunate enough to be able to give lavishly. Giving at all is a luxury. And the one who can give should be grateful for the good luck which enables him to do so.

"One mustn't expect gratitude. It's a thing that no one has a right to. After all, you do good because it's a pleasure. It's the purest form of happiness there is. To expect thanks for it is really asking too much. If you get it—well, it's like a bonus on shares on which you've already received a dividend. It's grand, but you mustn't look upon it as your due."

That, I'm thinking, is Good Medicine for what ails a lot of us these days. For giving is one of the most pleasant things we have to do. And, nine times out of 10, it isn't appreciated. So to the irksomeness of sacrifice we add the bitterness of a grouch at their ingratitude. (And don't be tooled because I'm doing this preaching. I get just as mad as you do when the Bread line doesn't treat me as if I were Mrs. God!) But we're all wrong.

It's swell to give! It's the best of fun and the best of luck. And we who can do it should be everlastingly thankful. Then why demand medals for having a picnic?

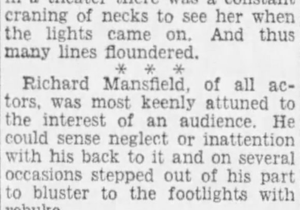
MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

The Sweet and Lowdown

To the average woman, an eligible bachelor, glorying in his freedom, is almost as amusing as a nice plump turkey strutting about just before the holidays.



The Christmas cravat, even when it happens to be a man's favorite style and color, somehow always gives him a childish, self-conscious feeling, like that of a schoolboy caught mailing a valentine.

* * *

When a woman falls out of love it is always with a grand splash and a lot of shattered illusions—but a man just sort of eases out of it and into another love as painlessly as he changes from one golf-stick to another.

* * *

If every young man and woman had to prove himself and herself qualified to get a marriage license, as they do to get a license to run a motor car, perhaps they wouldn't regard it as "just a scrap of paper," and there would be fewer matrimonial wrecks.

* * *

The sensation of falling in love is a thrill that no woman would want to miss. But, to a man, falling in love is like taking an anesthetic; he doesn't know that anything is happening to him, until he wakes up to hear the clergyman pronouncing the blessing.

* * *

Nearly everybody envies somebody else; but you never heard a blonde wishing that she had been born a brunette or a man wishing that he had been born a girl.

* * *

Nothing, not even the dollar, has been so deflated in value as a girl's kisses; and the deflation will continue just as long as an attractive man continues to find the world full of "yes-women."

* * *

When a gentleman discovers that he has made love to the wrong woman, he doesn't snap her off like a telephone receiver; he eases her down gently with flowers, regrets and a few sweet alibis. That's his requiem.

To a man, getting married is like having a tooth out; he can face it so much more bravely and calmly if it happens to him suddenly and he's given no time to think about it.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Promise of a Star

I want a month in Venice,
A year or two in Spain;
If I could sail to China,
I'd not come home again!

For earth has sun-drenched highways
And narrow, twisted streets
To lead me far from old regrets
And thought of past defeats.

I long to rove in Egypt
Beside the tawny Nile,
Until the sphinx can prove my cares
Worth neither tear nor smile.

Who has not known its power,
This lure of lands afar?

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Aren't you too aggressive in support of what you consider your "just rights?"

It takes little to offend your dignity.

You will fight in defense of your 'integrity" or anything that savors of "an insult to your intelligence."

This uncontrolled sensitiveness and an exaggerated opinion of what you represent, gets you into a lot of trouble.

Often you are depressed because of what you hear people say about you.

Perhaps no slight was intended; on the other hand, some people say and do things fully intending to rouse your 'touch and go" temper.

Throughout your whole life you have had much unhappiness as a result of your oversensitive nature.

Why allow anyone to have such a power over you?

Why allow your imagination to picture so much that is unpleasant?

Be more independent and prove to those who censure you that you don't care a whoop what they think, by being less aggressive in your own defense.

Roosevelt Faith Justified In Conservation Corps

By James T. Williams, Jr.

CHRISTMAS DAY was the brighter in 300,000 American homes because, by prevailing upon Congress to provide for the establishment of the Civilian Conservation Corps, President Roosevelt was able to give 300,000 Americans a new start in life.

The high expectations of the President in proposing this new national enterprise to Congress have been more than realized in all the 1,300 conservation camps that have been established all over the United States.

The President predicted that the type of work that the Civilian Conservation Corps would do would prove of "definite practical value, not only through the prevention of great financial loss, but also as a means of creating future national wealth."

"The Civilian Conservation Corps," he said, "will conserve our precious natural resources. It will pay dividends to the present and future generations. It will make improvements in the national and state domains which have been largely forgotten in the past few years of industrial development."

But the Civilian Conservation Corps is doing more than this, as President Roosevelt said it would.

"More important," he said, "than material gains will be the moral and spiritual value of such work. The overwhelming majority of unemployed Americans, who are now walking the streets and receiving private or public relief, would infinitely prefer to work."

* * *

Letters Show Value of Plan

THE President's faith in the rank and file of his fellow citizens is fully shared by the Army officers who command the conservation camps throughout the country. The applications for membership in the corps far exceed the quota of the several states. Thousands of letters received by the government from the young men attending these camps afford convincing evidence that "the moral and spiritual value" of their work is even exceeding the material gains to the nation.

All of these letters are intensely human documents. Several of the best of these appear in the current issue of American Forests, which is published by the American Forestry Association. This association offered prizes for the best letters written by enrolled members of the Conservation Corps on the subject, "What the Civilian Conservation Corps Has Done For Me."

These letters "form a remarkable narrative of human experiences." They are "the best spoken evidence thus far available of the real value of the Civilian Conservation Corps to the youth of America and to the thousands of homes which they left for the 'road,' in search of work to help relieve distressed parents."

* * *

A Noteworthy Letter

"To give an adequate conception of what the C. C. C. has done for me, I am impelled to describe the background leading up to my connection with it.

"First, imagine yourself as a young man of good family, well educated, happy, prosperous and surrounded by everything that makes life worth while.

"Then imagine yourself torn from this environment and driven like a hunted dog through four years of unemployment, hunger and famine, ending in the complete and utter degradation of a homeless bum.

"I am losing faith in everything that goes to make life worth while. The day a social worker met me in a Springfield, Ill., 'flop' house and persuaded me to join the C. C. C. was a turning point in my life. I was almost a physical wreck. Within 30 days I gained 30 pounds in weight. As a citizen I am transformed. Government is a hateful thing to a bum. It has removed from my door the specter of want. What more natural than that my old radical tendencies are being replaced by the stirrings of some of the finer attributes of good citizenship. In forestry I have for the first time found work that appeals to me. Life in the C. C. C. has restored my faith. Spiritual life can not exist for a man forced to live like a famine-driven wolf."

From a camp in New Mexico comes the record of "a home and harvest saved" by the money sent back by one of the younger members of the family from his earnings as a member of the Civilian Conservation Corps. He writes:

"I feel we are doing a great work. I know we are helping thousands of worthy but poor parents and paving the way for the generations to come."

During his campaign his proposal to set up the Civilian Conservation Corps brought Mr. Roosevelt the criticism and ridicule of his political opponents.

In 300,000 homes in the recent Christmas season the President received the gratitude of the family for the national benefaction which the Civilian Conservation Corps has proved to be.

Human Side of the News

Helen Keller's Estimate of Bernard Shaw—Anne Sullivan Macy, a Great Woman

By Edwin C. Hill

FEW personalities on the human side of the news are more arresting and admirable than Miss Helen Keller, whose spirit is so vital that she freed herself from silence and the dark.

No one has more keenly and justly analyzed that genius and mountebank, Bernard Shaw, than Miss Keller. For he lacks, she tells us, that quality which goes to the making of a Friend of Man. He has sacrificed emotion to intellect, intuition to reason. There are no mellowing shadows in his mind. Every inch of it is relentlessly glaring. No sense of mystery or of dreams abides there.

And Mr. Shaw, as Miss Keller says, is never happy unless he is making some one else thoroughly uncomfortable. He is so stridently self-confident that he cannot conceive the possibility that weakness and hesitation may go hand in hand with spiritual strength and radiance. He is wanting when weighed in the scales of supreme genius.

Three years ago the philosopher, Walter Pitkin, listing the living Americans who had achieved most, named only four in the first group. And in his second group of 10 he named the woman who made Helen Keller what she is today, who freed the spirit of a child. She is Anne Sullivan Macy, who lives in Forest Hills, New York. She is nearly 70 now and only a dim flicker of sight is left to her. But as Nella Braddy so beautifully tells her story in her book, "Anne Sullivan Macy," she still likes the rich, warm tide of life where it strikes the rapids, not where it runs smooth.

Herself a child of squalor and desperate misfortune, fighting blindness for many years, she took charge of Helen Keller when Helen was a little child, irrevocably blind, deaf and dumb, slipping farther and farther in the darkness, yet a strong, tireless, quick-tempered child. It was Anne Sullivan Macy's task, first of all, to win the love of this child who had always done exactly as she pleased and intended to keep on doing as she pleased.

* * *

The First Step Out of Darkness

MISS BRADY gives us an unforgettable picture of little Helen sitting on the floor, in her nightgown, the image of stubbornness and despair. And then the miracle began to unfold under the teacher's patient, loving hand. By touching objects and by finger movements into Helen's hand, Anne began teaching the child to spell. She gave her a mug and held her hand under a pump as the cold water gushed forth. By finger movements she spelled the word "W-A-T-E-R" several times.

That was the first step out of the darkness and the silence, out of loneliness and despair. Within a few hours Helen had added thirty new words to her vocabulary. The mind that could not see, that could not hear, that could not speak, fairly leaped to swift understanding. Her powers were remarkable, and presently, after only eleven lessons, and taught by Miss Sara F. Fuller of the Horace Mann School for the Deaf, Helen was able to say, haltingly, "I'm not so dumb now."

For 40 years, thereafter, Annie and Helen labored incessantly with Helen's voice, with results that the world knows. Anne never let pity blind her common sense. She demanded of Helen what she would have demanded of a seeing and hearing girl. More, in fact, for it took Helen twice as long to prepare her lessons. To this Helen owes the fact that she has been accepted on equal terms by the seeing and hearing, and this is the greatest pride of her life.

Mark Twain once wrote to Helen Keller:

"You are a wonderful creature—you and your mother together, Miss Sullivan, I mean, for it took the pair of you to make a complete and perfect whole."

Tarkington's Queer Prediction

THAT admirable gentleman and gifted writer, Booth Tarkington, passes through New York on his leisurely progress from Kennebunkport to his Indiana home. Coming to the time of life when even the wisest of men indulge in prophecy, he predicts that the time will come, and at a date not so distant, when very few books will be written and no plays. This, if you please, from one of the most successful of all American novelists and playwrights.

Radio is the reason, says Monsieur Beaucaire, of Indianapolis. He quotes the saying that all progress is due to laziness, and that man, being too lazy to harness a horse, invented the automobile.

"I am sure," says Tarkington, "that when television arrives and other magic which will follow television, when entertainment comes to the armchair and the fireside, that few will use the energy to read novels or go to plays."

With the light almost gone from the eyes that have gazed so humanly and understandingly upon this world, Booth Tarkington gallantly laughs that near-blindness is not as bad as one might think it to be. It depends so much upon what is inside of a man or a woman—on faith and hope and sureness of soul.

And so today, writing his clean and arresting tales, he no longer has use for his famous dozen of newly-sharpened yellow pencils and the yellow pads of paper which gave us "The Gentleman from Indiana," "Monsieur Beaucaire," "Cherry," the "Penrod" books, and so many more which have given pleasure and something even deeper to millions of readers. He dictates now, some two thousand words a day, and finds comfort in the new method of work.
